AMBURGERS, AUG 28, ON THE EVE

ONE LAST NIGHT WITH THE HARDWARE

Amburgers slept with the belt. Stone Cold Fart Toot Squeek kicked the door in, stole the hardware, and gave the house a bottom line.

EDITOR'S LETTER

The belt slept. Nobody else did.

Amburgers slept with the belt like the season still loved him. Stone Cold kicked that idea through the wall. Mad Pooper terrorized Dublin. Boom begged for a therapist. Kickers n Jigba put 179.86 on the champion and dared anybody to call it football.

Amburgers went to sleep Aug 28 with the Lana Straw belt under one arm. That was the last quiet minute of the title reign. Stone Cold Fart Toot Squeek kicked the door, took the hardware, and left Amburgers on the carpet. Draft night still found time for the relegation ceremony: fire in a roasting pan, hands over hearts, ashes on the face.

Mad Pooper hit Dublin. Celery Stinks hit the field in a blonde wig. Boom ran the carousel until Monday required a therapist. Kickers n Jigba put 179.86 on the champion. The bruise is still settling.

The auction felt like the halftime show. The rest of the weekend was the game.

ONE LAST NIGHT WITH THE HARDWARE

Austin 3:16 Says the Reign Is Over

Stone Cold Fart Toot Squeek kicked the door, stole the belt, dropped Amburgers on the carpet, chugged for the house, and told everybody the bottom line.

THE STRAW STAFF · KAYFABE DESK · AUG 28-30

And that's the bottom line, cause Stone Cold Fart Toot Squeek said so. Google Photos · draft weekend

"Enjoying my last night …" Amburgers · Aug 28

Amburgers thought the belt was still theirs. Soft pillow. Soft light. Soft last night. Then the front door ceased to be a door.

Stone Cold Fart Toot Squeek kicked it in: black vest, bald head, glass raised, zero interest in a polite transfer of power. He ripped the Lana Straw championship off Amburgers like a man reclaiming stolen property, dropped them face-down on the carpet, and opened a beer for the house. Then another. Then John 3:16, loud enough to count as a title change.

The speech was short. This is his belt. This is his house. And that's the bottom line, cause Stone Cold Fart Toot Squeek said so. A week later Amburgers posted the memorial: "Once...a great belt hung on this wall..." Correct. It hangs somewhere louder now.

> "No one asked for it, but he just went for it and … had his coronation ceremony."

RELEGATION CEREMONY

Ashes for the Brothers Who Fell

The belt changed hands. Then the league lit a disposable pan and marked the brothers who fell. Hands over hearts. Fire optional. Fire present.

THE STRAW STAFF · DRAFT NIGHT

The draft board witnessed. It did not intervene. Draft weekend

The parent tent for new members was funny. The rest of it was, as H Town put it, "a little over the top." That was the compliment. Kicking a guy while he is down is the point. Fart Toot Squeek loved the ashes so much he started shopping for sequels before the smoke cleared. Longer menu. More traditions. Same fire pan if the budget demands it.

THE TRADITION DESK

The ashes stayed. The champion wants a sequel series.

AFTER THE BELT CHANGED HANDS

The Best Weekend of the Year

Mad Pooper terrorizes Dublin. Boom loses to a tire. The Champeens induct a cult. The Wheaton Dick Whacker starts the 364-day clock.

Where $200 goes to die with dignity. Draft weekend

First opponent of the year: Goodyear. Discord · Aug 28

AUCTION SNAPSHOT

Premier: 192 picks · 18 keepers · $2,410 spent · max $76
Champeens: 192 picks · 0 keepers · $2,376 spent · max $73

Before anyone nominated a player, The Jackal was already filing from Dublin. Three resort elevators compromised. Lobby compromised. Staff working anti-poo powder overtime. "There is a serial, resort, dooker on the loose in Dublin. I'm afraid that he is only getting more powerful."

Closer to Fredericksburg, Amburgers needed an air pump for "the kicking balls in my luggage." Jesus Neck Tattoo, ever the scholar: "Not sure if I'm agreeing to a sexual act or genuine request for an inflation device."

Boom Baum made the interstate and lost to a tire. By daylight the boards were handwritten, the laptops were open, and everybody pointed like the belt ceremony had already settled the hierarchy.

The Champeens ran orientation without the brochure. "Welcome to the cult .. errr league!" "Ngl- it does feel like I joined a cult."

Correct. The auction was only one sacrament.

BIKES, PLANKS, WATERMELON

The Body Keeps Score

Somebody wondered if the room was too old for this. Then the room bought tricycles, flooded a pool and treated half a watermelon like game equipment.

Facebook Marketplace, official mobility partner of the Hemorrhoid Games.

Mario Kart, with tomorrow morning attached.

Balance left the chat.

DRAFT WEEKEND FASHION DESK

Dress Code: Explain Later

Celery Stinks hit the field in the look Fart Toot Squeek picked out: blonde wig, green top, purple skirt. Amburgers' parents swore they had seen a girl. The Wheaton Dick Whacker showed up day one already dressed for war. Somebody's parent typed the only sane sentence of the weekend and the league treated it like a joke setup.

Celery Stinks. Styling by Fart Toot Squeek.

Open space. No buttons. No mercy.

"Got my day 1 outfit ready to go!"

A parent tried reason. Cute.

PARENTS REVIEW THE FILM

Celery Stinks wanted it on record: the skirt and wig were involuntary. Fart Toot Squeek had picked the fit. Amburgers tried explaining that to the parents. The parents asked which guy. Amburgers pointed at the skirt and wig. Oh, they said. We thought that was a girl. Then they gave full marks for crushing it anyway.

> "Is my son ... going to the draft??"
> OC002 · AUG 28

There is no dress code because a dress code would lose. Day one arrived in formalwear. The title change arrived as Stone Cold. The field arrived as Celery Stinks in a blonde wig, scanning for intelligent life and finding Kickball instead.

The Champeens already called it a cult. Wardrobe just brought the uniforms.

BEFORE AND AFTER

Aging Reality, Live From the Pod

H Town floated the age question. Fart Toot Squeek shut it down with one weekend of virility. Boom sat on his hands for two hours, then unveiled nine dollar players like a magic act. Amburgers left one point on the kickball field and called it humility.

S05 EP1 · AUG 20 · DRAFT WEEKEND PREP

The Hemorrhoid Games Were Coming

"Draft is one week away. I just, I get chills saying it. It's like Christmas times 10."

Amburgers still carried back-to-back titles and the fresh bruise of relegation. Fart Toot Squeek admitted the cooking competition exists because he sucks at cooking. Proxies narrowed to births and deaths. "Sorry about weddings."

Ed Orgeron even mailed in a cameo on the attendance fight. The weekend did not care. It arrived on schedule.

S05 EP02 · SEP 3 · TRIUMPH, DEFEAT, JOY, HUMILITY

Sore Muscles, Confirmed

"did anyone else think maybe we're getting a little too old for this"

Celery Stinks collapsed after the 40. Tricycles left burns. Mario Kart left collisions. Amburgers came one point short with inches still sitting on the kickball field. Watermelon left the realm of food and entered the realm of punishment, The Guy Next Door working the feed like a beer bong.

"if we didn't care then this wouldn't be that great." That is the entire business model.

RUNNING BACKS	EVERY NOMINATION	AUCTIONEER DESK	BOOM SILENCE

The Draft, Recounted

The running backs walked into the room like celebrities and left like ransom notes. Every nomination felt urgent. Hands flew. Boards filled. Somebody would barely get a name out before the bidding turned into a bar fight with dollar bills.

Cowboys September Dreams ran the Premier auctioneer desk like a man possessed, voice climbing every time another back hit the board. Fart Toot Squeek and Diamond Dogs turned Gibbs into a cage match. Boom spent early, vanished for two straight hours, then resurfaced with a parade of one-dollar players while the room cheered like church let out.

Across the hall the Champeens were no calmer. Amburgers watched Jonah Coleman get sniped out from under him. Picks kept flying. The night refused to behave. By the end the draft felt secondary only because everything else had already cooked the league first.

"we've got to do all this amazing like really we just have a ton of fun ... and then the draft feels almost secondary until you get in it." Fart Toot Squeek

We Printed the Wrong Winner

The last issue went out ninety-five minutes after the commissioner confessed. It was already wrong. Nobody minded, because one reader wanted it on paper.

Tuesday, Sept. 15, at 9:50 p.m., Fart Toot Squeek told the Discord he had made "a grave mistake" with the kicker scoring, and that fixing it would flip Jerry GM + Jerry Owner's game. At 11:25 p.m. the Week 1 issue went out with Jerry losing that game by 0.30. The correction, the confession and a question about the commissioner's goatee are on page 4.

Jerry read it anyway, the next morning at 6:15.

On the pod that Thursday, the Guy Next Door described the dream in full: a season of these, printed, handed out at draft weekend, and a ceremony where "the winner sits down and gets to sign everybody's edition."

Until then there is this one. Bijan changed teams again. H Town lost his name by 1.24. A knockout manager meant to type a hundred. And Boom Baum asked for forty-five trades, received none, and got mail.

The Minimum Is 45

Boom came to draft weekend to win it all. Two losses later he was trading with nobody and reading mail at breakfast.

The promise is on the record. Before draft weekend Boom Baum left the pod a voicemail, and on Sept. 17 the hosts finally played it: "Boom Baum is coming and ready to win it all, baby. Let's go."

The same episode had already looked at his roster. The hosts ran down the worst offenses in football and found Boom holding the only fantasy-relevant players on most of them. "That's a recipe for relegation my friends." Somebody predicted the cure: take screenshots of his team now, and by next week it would be "30 to 40 percent different."

It was zero percent different. Not for lack of trying. When the Scott Ramsays made a catch on Friday, Boom sent congratulations with terms attached: "congrats on the catch.... Now trade with me." Nobody did. Sunday the Shiny Hineys beat him 112.32 to 89.22, and on Monday at 3:50 p.m. he filed the grievance.

> I just wanna say the low amount of trades this season is really impacting my mental health. I need to meet a minimum of 45 trades a season for it to be successful.

TRANSCRIBED AS WRITTEN · THE ORIGINAL IS THE COVER

Eight minutes later Boom asked the commissioner a procedural question: "if you got a friend into the league is there a system in place to uninvite them?"

At 9:02 Cowboys September Dreams proposed a telethon: "a Sarah McLachlan arms of the angel commercial where, instead of sad animals, it's sad pictures of Boom and its McLachlan doing a call to action to make trades to help the helpless and vulnerable booms of the league."

At 9:41 H Town delivered the forecast. ESPN projected Boom ninth.

THE COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE

A Grave Mistake

The league voted to shave a point off long field goals in 2027. The commissioner started in 2026, took it back, and handed a win to the fastest arch-nemesis he has ever had.

Fifty-two yards. Full price until 2027. Shiny Hineys · Monday, Sept. 21

At the draft weekend Rules Round Table the league agreed to trim the 40- and 50-yard field goals by a point, starting next season. Fart Toot Squeek, commissioner and reigning champion, turned it on this season instead. Tuesday night at 9:50 he came clean to everyone at once.

> I totally forgot about the delayed onset of the rule change and implemented it this season. Y'all will see it change some scores slightly and much to my chagrin it will flip the outcome of Jerry GM and Dave Ten Haves game. I'm going to do some push ups, run 10 40s, and keep my head on a swivel so this never happens again. My deepest apologies Lana Straw
> FART TOOT SQUEEK · TUESDAY, SEPT. 15, 9:50 P.M. · 8 REACTIONS

The loser had already filed. Eight minutes before the apology, Neaux Gold, All Glory: "I was the West Michigan of week 1."

Eleven minutes after it, the winner issued a statement. "We respect your honesty and openness in this difficult time." Six reactions. The commissioner answered with a gif of Toby from The Office.

On the pod Thursday the commissioner called it the "worst mistake I've ever made as a commissioner." Jerry had sent in a voicemail before the ruling, arguing that "what really separates the men from the boys are the adjustments."

Wednesday night Jerry opened a second front.

> Did [the commissioner] shave a goatee just for the stone cold bit at draft weekend or is he walking around austin like that? I see Scott two days a year so I have no reference. Can he go within 100 yards of a school?
> JERRY GM + JERRY OWNER · WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 16, 8:58 P.M.

One minute later: "I'm asking, respectfully." Six reactions. On the pod the commissioner called Jerry "the fastest arch nemesis I've ever experienced," then spoke to him directly.

> You come at the champ, you best not miss, you know, Stone Cold part two is coming for you and I've got the mic, bitch.

THE RULING, ENFORCED

The pod filed #Pointgate next to #RamsayGate, the league's standing theory that the scoreboard bends toward the Ramsays. For once it bent the other way, toward the man asking about schools. The appeal was heard Sunday, downstairs, by the commissioner's other club. Mac Attack 132.98, Jerry 107.38.

THURSDAY NIGHT, 8:20 P.M.

Was That a Real Trade?!

The Shiny Hineys paid $69 for Bijan Robinson in August. Three weeks into the season he was a Jigba. It was not the first time the Hineys let him go.

1 AUG. 26, 2025 — To Boom Baum — The Hineys ship him out.

2 SEPT. 12, 2025 — Back to the Hineys — Seventeen days away.

3 AUCTION, 2026 — Hineys, $69 — Paid at the auction.

4 SEPT. 17, 2026 — To the Jigba — Week 2: 9.6 points.

Thursday at 8:20 p.m. the slip hit the Discord and Boom Baum, a man who has been posting "Anyone want to trade? I am bored" since August, watched two other clubs make one. "Holy hell. Was that a real trade?!" Eleven seconds later he answered himself. "Holy shit."

The Kickers n Jigba took Bijan Robinson, Chris Olave and Zach Charbonnet. The Shiny Hineys took back Davante Adams, Javonte Williams, Braelon Allen and Garrett Wilson. Both clubs were 2-0 by Monday.

The commissioner saw a pattern and said so.

> it feels like your relationship with Bijan is a love/hate thing. That's the only way I can make sense of you shipping him away year after year
> FART TOOT SQUEEK · 8:52 P.M.

The Hineys had a scouting report ready, and a second reason nobody expected.

> He's Gumby. The most durable RB I've ever seen. I'm also tired of watching Falcon games.
> SHINY HINEYS · 8:55 P.M.

Eight minutes after the deal the Hineys added a footnote the bot never printed: "the bot forgot the $5 FAAB Rob gave me. Really made the trade". The Straw has no receipt for the five dollars. The Hineys have their word.

Sunday settled nothing and embarrassed everyone a little. Adams, three days a Hiney, scored 36.5 in the flex against Boom. Bijan, three days a Jigba, scored 9.6 against the Ramsays. The Jigba won anyway, 144.62 to 76.68, and sit first in the Premier.

The Jigba is a Ramsay club. Readers who keep a #RamsayGate file may add a page.

"Holy hell. Was that a real trade?!"

SHORT STORIES

Bread, Burritos and a Bot

THE NAME

Change It NOW

The bet was one week of the loser's name, decided on Week 1 starting lineups. The Scott Ramsays had 99.54. H Town had 98.3. They did not even play each other.

Thursday at 10:00 p.m. the Ramsays named the price: "I want your name to be 'The Little Bread Boi'." Nine seconds later: "Change it NOW". Then a clarification.

Commemorative art. H Town, Sept. 18

> Well, you are the LITTLE bread boi.
> THE SCOTT RAMSAYS · 10:18 P.M.

The next morning H Town posted the AI art himself. The Little Bread Boi went 0-2 and still holds the Premier wild card.

LUNCH

Ramsayrrito

"What is Thomas eating?" Boom Baum · Wednesday, 1:24 p.m.

Wednesday was a Lana Straw taco outing, per Jackin' Goff. Boom posted the evidence with a face on the burrito and one question. The Ramsays answered in one word: "Ramsayrrito." The Kickers n Jigba asked the subjects a follow-up: "How does it make yall feel when AI changes your faces like that?" No one answered.

THE BOT

Destroying Families

At 1:23 p.m. Wednesday the Shiny Hineys gave the league's bot its standing orders: "Make sure to give Boom Baum terrible advice". At 1:29 the commissioner asked it a family question: "who's the best manager between the Ramsay Brothers over the history of the Lana Straw league?"

The answer arrived and so did the commissioner's feelings. "I think I love you." Cowboys September Dreams quoted the verdict for the rest of the house.

CHAMPEENS

The Worst Day of the Week

The Jackal, who went 1-1 and beat Jordan's Trainers by 25 on Sunday, filed the week's most honest review of the NFL on Tuesday evening.

> The worst part of the football season is Tuesdays. I can only hear about how Caleb Williams cried too much so many times.
> THE JACKAL · TUESDAY, SEPT. 22, 6:34 P.M.

Amburgers spent Tuesday morning on public works, announcing live scoring for whichever Lana league you are not in, straight to your phone. The Guy Next Door built it. Nobody has to open a browser to watch the Premier suffer anymore.

LAST PLACE LEAVES

Double Tap the Zero

The new knockout league hands every club a season's budget and one warning. Two managers spent it in a day. One of them meant to.

The warning was not complicated. H Town had even read up on it: "I did like read like an article or two and said like hey don't spend all your money in the first week okay cool". Then he opened the waiver screen to bid a hundred on Jeremiyah Love.

> I put it a hundred and I just double tap the zero
> H TOWN · ON THE POD · SEPT. 17

The box was too narrow to show the extra zero. It showed up on the wire instead, as the whole budget. That evening the Shiny Hineys, catching up on the episode, reported their relief: "I thought someone just really liked what they saw from Jeremiah Love."

The Kickers n Jigba, playing the knockout as Robert's Rowdy Team, did it on purpose. $650 on James Cook and $333 on Omarion Hampton, and at 7:31 Wednesday morning a full disclosure: "I blew my whole wad". The Hineys: "Robert is a waiver hog". The Guy Next Door: "None of my 10 dollar bids went through. WTF!" A minute later Boom Baum asked the room a question that told you everything about his week: "What's a chop league?"

The Jigba got some of it back. Friday Rowdy flipped Hampton to the Otter is Jackin Goff for Caleb Douglas and $300. The Guy Next Door reviewed the voting: "None of the people voting for Otter bid 300 on Hampton except for Otter." Sunday the Otter is Jackin Goff scored 62.02, the low score, and was eliminated.

They were the second club out. The first, in Week 1, was the commissioner's, Fart Toot Sneak, at 86.9. Cowboys September Farts survived Week 2 on 65.20, 3.18 points clear of the exit.

Then on Wednesday the Scott Ramsays' club, JackaWhack, put $1,000 on Ja'Marr Chase, all of it, and announced it the night before in their own spelling.

> Nah I already spent all my FAAB on Jamar

THE GUEST · THE GUY NEXT DOOR

I'm Not Going to Overreact

Week 1 gave the Guy Next Door one quarterback touchdown and nothing else. He went on the pod to explain what he did about it the next morning.

The pod's guest this week is in his fourth season and says he has heard every episode. He spent his Week 1 on the couch with three kids, a laptop and a phone, watching a team that scored, in the hosts' summary, "basically no touchdowns whatsoever from your entire team except for your quarterback."

> I said out loud to myself multiple times, I'm not going to overreact. And then I immediately, I'm like, the next morning, I'm like, I got to do something.
> THE GUY NEXT DOOR · S05 EP03

Something was Drake London. Monday night he sent Caleb Williams and Tetairoa McMillan to Boom Baum and took London and Dylan Sampson. On air he called it a bet against the Panthers throwing forever and on London's quarterback coming back. The hosts recalled the trade poll splitting almost exactly in half.

Sunday London scored 6.9. Caleb scored 7.22 and McMillan 13.6, both for Boom, who lost anyway. The Guy Next Door beat Jackin' Goff 89.76 to 81.58, the closest game in the Premier.

The episode ended back at draft weekend. The watermelon contest, the Guy Next Door said, came down to "just raw competition," and a technique he had studied on YouTube. Four days later he posted the dramatization at right.

Then, to eleven reactions: "Most importantly, this is just another example of the innovations in fantasy football we can accomplish when we think with our Peen league."

Amburgers, declining a Javonte Williams offer Tuesday night: "I will not fall for the banana in the tailpipe of teams playing this cowboy defense…"

Dear Fart Toot Squeek, Im sorry you lost three in a row. We feel sad that you are 0-3 and might get relegated from lana Straw premere league.

We checked. No champion in league history has opened a title defense 0-3. You have the fifth-most points in the Premier and the most scored against you, by 54.7, which sounds like bad luck until we remember you started Drake Maye.

You told the pod you would not "roll over and fold." Then you shopped Puka with a hip that was "not making progress," bought a tight end at 2:30 a.m., traded him by breakfast, and told the bot you had "never felt this way before." The bot sent trade ideas.

Maybe you should make sume trades. Oh. You did.

THE REIGNING CHAMPION

Drake Mayday

No champion in league history had opened a title defense 0-3. Fart Toot Squeek has, while scoring the fifth-most points in the Premier and giving up the most.

Last week's Point After promised one of Boom Baum and Fart Toot Squeek would be 1-2 by Monday. The quarterbacks settled it. Brock Purdy gave Boom 35.28. Drake Maye gave the champion 2.76, a number most kickers would be embarrassed by. Gibbs (37.9) and Kittle (23.2) could not hide it. The belt lost, 122.08 to 113.96.

By 1:26 p.m., second quarter, the Guy Next Door had seen enough: "It's officially into Drake Maybe season". By evening it was Drake Mayday, and All Gold, No Glory posted Maye on the sideline at 28-3, receiving a coach's thoughts at close range. The caption cannot be printed in a family publication, or this one. Six people laughed. One of them was the champion.

This is new ground. Every defending champion since 2017 found at least one win in three weeks. The champion's only other 0-3 start came in 2017 and ended 5-7, which is the good news.

Sunday, third quarter, 28-3. The champion's quarterback receives feedback. All Gold, No Glory · 8:35 p.m. · 6 reactions

THE CASE FOR CALM

He holds the wild card this morning.

He is moving: $34 on Sadiq, flipped for Lawrence, plus Sam Darnold for $1.

THE CASE FOR CONCERN

COVER STORY, CONTINUED

The Toilet Bowl Has Room

The champion has been down this drain before. This week he went looking for a quarterback, a Ferrari and, on the side, love.

The 0-3 experience, in two panels, from the Premier's other 0-3 club. Jackin' Goff · Sun 5:20 p.m. · 4 reactions

The Toilet Bowl is where the Premier's five non-playoff clubs go to find out who gets flushed. The Survivor bot keeps the table, and its cut line reads "PEENS ARE COMING!". He knows the plumbing: in 2024 he was above the line after one week and below it after two. He climbed back and won the 2025 title, which is either a comeback story or a warning.

On the pod Thursday, at 0-2, he laid out the plan. "It's a war of attrition," he said, and a champion does not "roll over and fold and say, Hey, you know, injuries screwed me." You work the wire. You work the trades. You "turn a paperclip into a Ferrari."

Then he went shopping, with a doctor's note attached. Thursday the Rams' coach said Puka Nacua's hip was "not making progress." Friday at 11:07 a.m. the commissioner listed him anyway: "Sadly, Puka is on the trading block. Send your offers if interested. If you're not at least a little bit scared to hit send then don't bother. I'm not gonna let him go for pennies". Two hours later Puka was doubtful. Sunday he was inactive. The pennies stayed in everyone's pockets.

Tuesday at 9:27 p.m. he asked the bot for "some trade ideas with teams who have multiple good QBs". At 2:30 a.m. the waivers ran and he won Kenyon Sadiq, a tight end, for $34, outbidding nine clubs, Backdoor Heat ($18) among them. At 7:46 a.m. he traded Sadiq to Backdoor Heat for Trevor Lawrence. Heat got its tight end after all. The champion got a quarterback and five hours of tight end ownership. The paperclip is in motion.

Downstairs, Mac Attack, the club he is on in name only, is 3-0 and plays Otter, also 3-0, on Sunday. Upstairs he plays Texas Tornado's Bush, 3-0, with Trevor Lawrence.

BOOM BAUM · 1-2

He Made Sume Trades.

Thursday he threatened the league with a robot. By Tuesday he had two trades, a win over the champion and a victory lap from the league's newest engineer.

Thursday began at 7:33 a.m. with a threat Boom attributed to the league's bot: it "just told me he is going to start auto-relegation if you clowns don't start trading immediately (preferably with me)". Jackin' Goff, 29 minutes later: "Then stop offering me Carnell Tate".

That morning's pod had the Jigba as guest, telling the world Boom once turned down Davante Adams because Adams was done. Boom filed his rebuttal at 12:10 p.m.: "the trade you were referring to that I mocked was Adams for McBride. And I still laugh at that." The Jigba, unmoved: "It wasn't just Adams. Classic misrepresentation".

At 3:43 p.m., to settle the argument, Boom traded for Davante Adams.

BOOM RECEIVES

Breece Hall, Bryce Young, Caleb Douglas

OUT: DAVANTE ADAMS, WOODY MARKS, CALEB WILLIAMS

Adams lasted two days, the shelf life of a Boom opinion, then went to Goff with Woody Marks and Caleb Williams.

Sunday Brock Purdy threw for 35.28 of Boom's points and Garrett Wilson, three days a Boom, caught 22.7. "Every time Purdy throws a touchdown and then I see it was to Kittle", Boom wrote at 6:11 p.m. It did not matter. Boom Baum 122.08, Fart Toot Squeek 113.96.

Monday, the method: "If you take a hit (of trades) that helps the pain." Tuesday the Trade Time Machine made it official: "Looks like [Boom] traded for a win for once 😉". For once.

Then the injury report reviewed his work. Sunday, Achane hurt his knee against the Chiefs in the Hineys' lineup, left with 1.7 and on Monday was ruled out for the season with a torn ACL. Breece Hall, one day a Boom, scored 7.0 and left the Lions game with a thigh injury; Monday he was week-to-week. Boom got out of one injury just in time, and into the other.

Tuesday Boom played golf with Otter, father of the girl who told him to make sume trades. He lost. Then he reported his own loss, on video, to the league.

THURSDAY NIGHT

Thinking About Bijan

A week after the Hineys shipped Bijan Robinson to the Jigba, the pod judged the deal, the Hineys traded away two of the players they got for him, and Bijan scored 35.3.

Thursday, 8:07 p.m., as Bijan ran for the Jigba.
Shiny Hineys · 4 reactions

On the pod Thursday the Jigba walked through the deal (four players for Bijan, Chris Olave and Zach Charbonnet) and confirmed a sweetener the bot never printed: "I added five fab in or 10 fab in to the offer." He was not sure which. His philosophy, he was sure of.

I definitely am like the most adaptable in my life when it comes to fantasy football. Like as soon as there's any sort of edge to be gained, I'm using it.

THE KICKERS N JIGBA · S05 EP04

The commissioner "did really disliked shiny side in this, just because it's the classic, you could have gotten more", then wished the Hineys well: "I hope shiny is right. Cause your team will be ridiculous." The Jigba: "Hey, thanks Scott. I really appreciate it."

That afternoon the Hineys flipped two of their Bijan haul, Davante Adams and Garrett Wilson, to Boom and took back De'Von Achane, a $45 auction buy, among others. That night Bijan scored 35.3 for the Jigba and the Hineys posted Wolverine, pining. Two minutes later Cowboys September Dreams checked on the Guy Next Door, who had taken Drake London from Boom: "how you feeling about that trade so far". London scored 24.9. The Jigba won that game too, naturally.

Sunday the Hineys lost to Texas Tornado's Bush, 99.74 to 91.68. Achane gave them 1.7 and a torn ACL. Adams scored 18.2 for Goff, Wilson 22.7 for Boom. The Hineys' former players had a lovely weekend elsewhere. The Guy Next Door, Monday: "The Shiney Hineys injury luck of 2025 has really turned in 2026". Boom, who knows the Hineys' side of a trade better than anyone, offered hope: "Shiney can trade his way back". Then: "He always finds a way".

The Jigba are 3-0, first in the Premier with 461.3 points, and a Ramsay club. Readers keeping the #RamsayGate file may add another page.

Bijan for the Jigba: 9.6, then 35.3.

ACHANE FOR THE HINEYS: 1.7

SHORT STORIES

Machines, Mayhem and Family

THE ENGINEER

The Trade Time Machine

All Gold, No Glory is new to the Premier, 3-0, and apparently an engineering department. Saturday at 9:18 a.m. he introduced “v0.1 of the Lana Straw Trade Time Machine”, a site that replays every trade of the season. It drew 11 reactions, the most of any post this week. The pitch included one question the league will be asking all year: “Who felt regret the fastest?”

Version 0.2 shipped Sunday morning. A 3-0 team has free time.

MONDAY NIGHT

Mayhem, in Real Time

At 7:28 p.m. Monday the Guy Next Door built the league a new way to suffer: Monday Night Mayhem, showing “every matchup that’s still up for grabs in both leagues”. The Nightmares were first in line: “Oh good. I can watch my team fail in real time 🫠 ”. Then a feature request: “Can you do one for chop league too ? So I can watch my teams fail in stereo”.

Jerry had his own plan: “All I need is a smooth 38.16 points from Dontayvion Wicks tonight”. The Nightmares, three minutes later: “Dear Wicks, please be JSN”. Wicks scored 4.2. All Gold, No Glory, at 8:03, on a catch: “I always get the feeling that even I could have made that catch while sitting on my couch and then I remember how I did at kickball during draft weekend”. Boom watched Case Keenum and made a decision: “I’m dropping my entire FAAB on Case Keenum”. The Guy Next Door lost to the Jigba on the same screen, and the Jigba closed the night: “GG. I got lucky”.

FAMILY

Edge to Rob

On Thursday’s pod the Jigba worried that the bot’s history mixes his seasons with those of Lily, a former manager and a Ramsay: “What I don’t want is the AI to come out here and say like actually Lily’s winning percentage was better than yours.” At 6:44 p.m. the bot ruled.

> Dead even on record. Lily scored more. Rob has the title, and he beat her to get it. Edge to Rob.
> THE LEAGUE’S BOT · THURSDAY

WAIVERS

Olive Garden

Achane’s knee made Ollie Gordon II the most coveted man in Miami, and six Champeens clubs bid. Otter, 3-0, won him at $41. Madison Beer bid $9 and woke up “amazed that Olive Gordon III went for so much.” By 8:31 a.m. he had a conspiracy: Otter “is trying to corner the market on RBs”.

Amburgers spent the morning advising the room to dump “Bijan Robinson Kenneth Walker, Zach, Charbonnet, Ollie Gordon” “as quickly as possible. Just in my opinion…” Otter, earlier: “It seemed like a strong pick up and I am willing to trade.” Jordan’s Trainers declined to supply a running back.

> Also I had dobbins last season and ended up down here with yall and had to run as a prostitute. So no dobbins lol

THE CHAMPEENS

Where the Party Is

Amburgers scored the most points in either flight and admitted to feeling filthy about a win. Jerry invited the Premier down. The Dreams woke up as Nightmares.

> The Champeens league is where the party is. Premier league, up there in your ivory tower, don't get down like we do.
> JERRY GM + JERRY OWNER · THURSDAY, SEPT. 24, 1:06 P.M.

The party's host is Amburgers, 3-0 and first, who scored 162.26 with Jaxon Smith-Njigba (31.36), Tyler Shough (27.3) and Kenyon Sadiq (21.0) with Brock Bowers' 23.6 on the bench like a casserole nobody needed. On the pod he confessed to Week 2: for $10 of FAAB, Cowboys September Dreams agreed to leave his tight end slot empty. Blake Corum's 9.7 would have filled it and won the game.

> It worked. … I feel very dirty. I'll just say that.
> AMBURGERS · S05 EP04

The commissioner ruled from the chair: "if these are two consenting adults, right? Then fine."

The Dreams have rebranded as the Cowboys September Nightmares, which is called reading the room. They scored 66.76, the low in either flight, with Achane at 1.7. The ACL news broke at 9:37 a.m. Monday. At 2:15 p.m. they listed him: "2026 Achane. Make me an offer. no lowballs. I know what I've got."

JERRY

Thursday night Jerry sent Justin Jefferson to Madison Beer for Ashton Jeanty. Then he started Bryce Young (14.14) over Joe Burrow (25.58) and lost to Prime Lime Time, 116.10 to 82.14. He blamed the roster, at 5:33 p.m.: "How my team plays when I need them to do anything!"

MADISON BEER

Madison Beer lost to Mac Attack 129.68 to 68.26 with Sam Darnold's 30.66 on the bench, and opened up. First: lifelong Panthers fan, name on a statue outside the stadium. Then, at 9:59 p.m., to five reactions: "Another piece: I had a botched vasectomy on Friday because my shit is too meaty and the doc had to "throw in the towel". Not kidding". At 10:24 p.m.: "I could use a vas god".

LAST PLACE LEAVES

A Thousand Dollars, Chopped

Boomer Frogs, the club that meant to bid a hundred on Jeremiyah Love and bid a thousand, scored 75.46 and went home. Love was not the problem.

The knockout room, Monday, 10:18 p.m.
Cowboys September Nightmares · 4 reactions

Last week H Town explained how a hundred-dollar bid became a thousand: "I just double tap the zero." This week the zero came due. Love scored 19.4, second-best on the roster behind Jared Goff's 21.36, and nobody else showed up: DJ Moore 9.7, Saquon Barkley 8.5, J.K. Dobbins 5.8 (no dobbins), Pat Freiermuth 4.1, Mark Andrews 3.9, Tetairoa McMillan 2.7. Last of ten. Chopped.

At the top, Robert's Rowdy Team scored 134.58 with Brock Purdy at 35.28 and James Cook, the $650 waiver buy, at 20.4, then traded Cook on Tuesday anyway. JackaWhack, the Scott Ramsays' club, scored 129.5, and Ja'Marr Chase, a thousand dollars and spelled Jamar, gave it 20.3.

The commissioner had already named the knockout's unluckiest charm on the pod: Omarion Hampton, "the player that is on the most chopped team so far". Rowdy spent $333 on him, then flipped him to the Otter is Jackin Goff, chopped in Week 2. He scored 5.6 this week for Michael's Magnificent Hiney, who survived.

Thursday evening the knockout started what Cowboys September Dreams called the "consolidate towards super teams" phase. We're Having Fun No sent Bijan Robinson to Prime Time's Next Door for Chase Brown and D'Andre Swift, then flipped Brown to Rowdy for Cook on Tuesday. Nine clubs remain. Fart Toot Sneak, the Otter is Jackin Goff and Boomer Frogs are out.

THE GUEST · THE KICKERS N JIGBA

Living in a River

The 2-0 Jigba came on the pod to describe what it is like when everything works. The hosts spent the rest of the hour predicting a week that then happened.

The commissioner introduced his brother as "in the honeymoon love phase of the season, undoubtedly." Josh Allen and Jaxon Smith-Njigba had been, by the host's count, the two most valuable players of the first two weeks, and the Jigba owned both. Even his kicker put up 10.5. The host, standing on the bank, put it this way.

> the rest of us are dealing with these little drips. You're, you're living in a river.
> FART TOOT SQUEEK · TO THE JIGBA

The Jigba, graciously: "it just feels like the water we're in at this point." On Allen, poetically: "it's like watching the best goal line running back who throws the ball the most beautifully in the NFL." On the future, wisely: "I'm trying to soak it in. Cause I know it can change." It has not changed. The Jigba are 3-0.

Then Boom's trade drought. The Jigba's theory was leverage, and a memory: Boom had turned down Davante Adams. "And he's like, no man, Davante's done. So. And then Davante went ahead and kicked his ass. That same week." Boom heard it, disputed it, and traded for Adams three and a half hours later.

A listener filed a programming note. The Kickers n Jigba, Thursday, 11:50 a.m.: "I'm thinking we should have a weekly segment for the [Texas Tornado's Bush] voicemail callled "RIP it and let it rip"."

Dear H Town, thank you for Tuesday's service. Jackin' Goff asked one polite question about the name changes, and you answered with Genesis, in five parts, starring the Shiny Hineys as a villain called the Twinkly Tookus.

Most of the gospel holds up. Doubts are in the margins.

The Preparation H Messiah

Jackin' Goff wanted background on the name changes. H Town gave him Genesis, in five parts and 47 minutes. Reprinted unedited, typos and all. The margins have questions.

PART 1

The Origin of Relegation

Let me tell you a story, my boy.

In Year 8 of the esteemed Lana Straw, before our little Peens League was even a twinkle in anyone's eye, a little shit named [Shiny Hineys] decided his season was over. In Week 5.[1] (I think. The trauma has blurred the details.)

Then he made the proclamation that would change Lana Straw forever: "Ok boys, I'm done. Season's over. I'm prepping for next year. Derrick Henry is on the block for draft dollars."[2] Or some such drivel.

He shipped Henry off for some Dawson Knox-like,waiver-wire retread[3] and the maximum allowable keeper dollars. The league, as was only logical, went apeshit. On him. On the guy who took the deal ([the Over/Under Achiever$] , I believe)[4]. But mostly on the Twinkly Tookus, as our shiny villain will be known henceforth.

Nobody had ever imagined a manager actively trying to lose, let alone in Week 5. The integrity of the league! The fun! Every remaining opponent would know the Tookus was lying down each week. Some of us had already played him... and lost.[5] Oh, the humanity !(Names withheld to protect the victims.)

This egregious act of treachery got us all mad. But it also got some of us thinking. Our last-place punishment clearly wasn't enough. Something had to be done.

Enter our hero. A modest man. A Lana elder statesman. Appalled like everyone at what had come of his precious league, and he had half a mind to do something about that little shit, Tookus. About that same time with time he had when he wasn't scouring other rosters for trade ideas, and bandying back terrible offers from [Boom Baum] (some things never change), he'd been watching early-season Ted Lasso, and a wild question took hold: "What if we could kick a tanker out of the league?" (1/?)

PART 2

Then, like a Preparation H Messiah, he conceived the idea that would change the destiny of Lana Straw forever. It's the reason you are here today, my little Peen Champion:

A thought so horrific it would crush tanking forever. So unthinkable that every manager would keep his roster updated all season long. The fear that one day you might no longer call yourself a Premier League member. It was terrible. It was perfect.

RELEGATION.

(Shiver)

But could he actually propose it? Last place banished to the underworld of an upstart AAA league, left to toil among the wannabes until he proved himself worthy again?

Cometh the moment, cometh the man. Not all heroes wear capes. He checked his junk (yep, still there) and flicked the first domino.

And who was this Moses who would lead Lana Straw to the Promised Land and birth an entire new league in the process?

That's right. You guessed it.

The H-Town Holy Rollers.[6]

(2/?)

NOTES FROM THE TRADE LOG

1 Week 9, by the trade log: Oct. 31, 2023. The trauma is understandable.

2 Henry had arrived in Week 4 from the same Over/Under, for CeeDee Lamb and Jordan Addison. He went back five weeks later.

3 Curtis Samuel. He scored 0.0 on the Hineys' bench and was on another roster within a week.

4 The Over/Under Achiever$. He believes correctly.

5 One of us, anyway. See page 5.

6 Champion in 2016, 2018 and 2020.

Draft weekend. What the plan became.

SCRIPTURE, CONTINUED

Dear Reader, We Were Not Right

PART 3

But here, the story takes a dark turn. In many ways it has a happy ending, but there were costs.

The first league mate our Righteous Savior of Lana would pitch was: his younger brother, the Great Oz behind the curtain of Lana Straw, the Commissioner himself, Fart Toot Squeek.

Equally indignant at the Tookus' shenanigans, the Commish wasted no time expressing his feelings. After hearing the pitch and only a few clarifying questions, he said "I love it. How do we do it?"

So we took the bare bones of the concept and fleshed it out. Not one, but two losers would be sent down to a fresh league of managers. An 8 team became 12. A toilet bowl tourney in the last 3 weeks of the season. Ball don't lie. Lowest total points goes down This would instill the necessary fear in the middling, the miserable, and the mischevious; trim the fat, and bring some hungry new blood into the league. Plus, we'd get a whole new crop of 12 fresh-faced hopefuls to corrupt into fantasy degenerates and Draft Weekend hellions.

What could possibly go wrong?

Not everyone was on board. There was a lot of internal debate, and the main sticking point was obvious: how horrifying it would be to have a season go so badly that you got relegated. A curse worse than death, naturally.

But then we reasoned it through. If you did the right things: drafted smartly, worked the waiver wire, made a few roster-improving trades, (mostly with Boom Baum)[7], you'd never get relegated. Right? There's justice in this world. Right?

Well, dear reader, we were not right. We had no idea how wrong we could be. And one of us was about to pay dearly for that miscalculation. (3/?)

PART 4

Nothing went as expected the next year.

The Commish did a great job recruiting, everyone bought in, and the new blood paid dividends almost immediately.

It bears saying: the Commish loves this league. It's his home away from home. He lives and dies with his team, sure, but he genuinely loves the personalities, the friendships, the shit-talking and the ribbing. Inside Lana Straw, he is fully in his element.

But fantasy football isn't easy, and when it's hard, it's almost unbearable. The performance of Fart Toot's soldiers on the field did not match the passion in the owner's box.

Like a cocky Razorback who swoops in, buys a legendary franchise, enjoys some early glory, and then watches the thing he loves turn to ash in his hands (not despite his decisions, but because of them), the Fart Toot missed the playoffs and found himself fighting for his very existence.

He was not alone in the toilet bowl. Beside him stood his two brothers: the aforementioned Lana Straw Legend and Peen League Progenitor, H-Town, and the youngest Ramsay bro, a past champion and current front-runner, Willie Nillies. But this story is not about them. They got out alive.[8]

Now, the Fart Toot has always loved a running quarterback, so he had ridden the coattails of the tush-pushing, running-for-his-life, is-he-good-or-isn't-he Jalen Hurts.

What an apropos name. In Week 1 of the toilet bowl, Hurts got hurt. And though it would take three more weeks for the Fart Toot to finish circling the bowl, he would not merely be hurt. He would be crushed.

Mighty Casey had struck out.

And so he became, for all of history, the first Relegated Ramsay.[9]

The End. (4/5)

EPILOGUE

Epilogue- Though he went down with a flush, you can't keep a good man down and there is justice in this league, because through some technicality that it still isn't absolutely clear.[10] [Fart Toot Squeek] returned the next year skipping the Peens league punishment through a breathtaking performance in the draft weekend and he would win it all.[11] But that little Peensters is a story for another day.

Signed,
The Architect of Relegation yet never relegated himself[12] ([H-Town Holy Rollers])

THE REBUTTAL

The Name's Tan King

The sermon's villain, the Shiny Hineys, was in the pews and objected within two minutes. Their 2023 season has a twist the preacher left out.

The Twinkly Tookus, still applying maximum effort to the wrong things.

Part 1 was barely up when the Hineys filed a correction from the second row: "*week 6 I was 0-6. Almost made playoffs with Warren and Tank Dell". The preacher promised "Details and Oh, we will get there Twinkly Tookus". The Hineys went with a new name instead, which is the fashion this week.

The name's Tan King to you

SHINY HINEYS · TUESDAY

Then theology: "I seem to remember two other managers following the strategy and they both placed lower than me".

A correction to the correction: the Hineys were 0-5, and they won Week 6, 108.50 to 98.12, over a club called Sybil's Daddy. Sybil's Daddy was H Town. "Names withheld to protect the victims," the sermon says. Fair enough.

	THE TOOKUS TAPES · SHINY HINEYS, 2023	RESULT
1–5	Five straight losses	0-5
6	Beat Sybil's Daddy (H Town), 108.50–98.12	1-5
7–8	Two more losses, by 22.5 and 55.56	1-7
Oct 31	Derrick Henry to the Over/Under Achiever$ for Curtis Samuel	trade
9–13	Five straight wins	6-7
14	Lost to Amburgers, 139.64–76.94	6-8
Final	Tenth of twelve. "Almost made playoffs."	10th

TWO WITNESSES

Six days before the sermon, the pod told this story. Amburgers: "Remember one year he was decided I'm just gonna tank and he couldn't, he couldn't even." Boom:

"He traded away everybody that year and just quit and then he won like five straight."

The commissioner, at 0-3: "didn't we have a lot of conversation about how the secret to fantasy football is you just have to surrender." He has not surrendered.

Between Parts 3 and 4 the Cowboys September Nightmares heckled from the choir loft.

The Hineys and the bot, still working through some things.

"This is a really long way to say 'and now the Peen league is actually the better league'"

COWBOYS SEPTEMBER NIGHTMARES · TUESDAY · H TOWN ANSWERED WITH BABY YODA

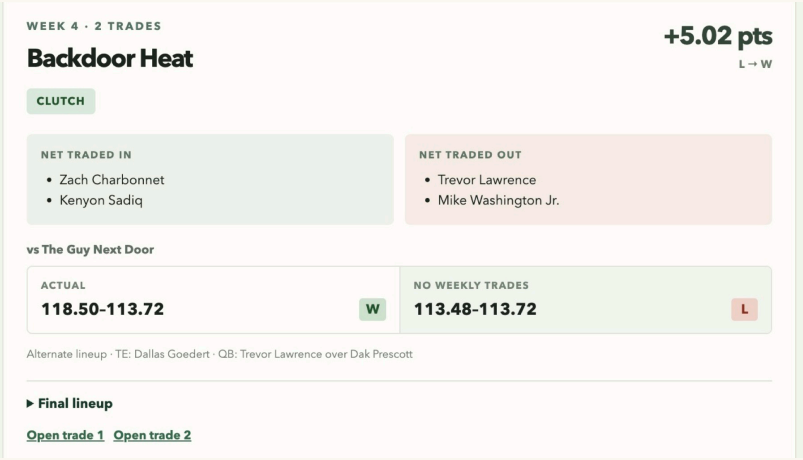
THE REIGNING CHAMPION, RENAMED

Relegated Ramsay, by Request

No defending champion had ever started 0-4. He did it with the best quarterback score in the Premier on his bench, then changed his name when asked nicely.

The pod saw it coming. H Town picked the Tornado to go 4-0, "and Scott's team would go to oh and four." Everyone on the pod, Amburgers included, then agreed they would rather be the champion at 0-3 than Amburgers at 3-0. It is under review.

Sunday the champion started Trevor Lawrence, acquired for a tight end he had owned for five hours. Lawrence scored 14.08. Drake Maye, on the bench, scored 28.66. Mike Evans sat next to him with 10.10. Either one wins a game he lost by 6.72.



The Lawrence trade, from the other end.

Lawrence was also his horse in a name bet made live on the pod. Boom took Bryce Young, who scored 23.46 on Boom's bench and won anyway.

Boom, Monday morning, with real feeling: "Damn. [the commissioner] that sucks. Drake Maye continues to spite you." Tuesday morning he settled the terms: "please change your name to 'The Relegated Ramsay'".

The name changed within the hour. The commissioner follows the rules faster than he sets lineups. His knockout club, shared with the Nightmares, was chopped the same weekend (page 11).

THE CASE FOR CALM

458.3 points, fourth in the Premier. His 128.98 was the week's fourth-best score.

He holds the wild card, from eleventh, again.

In 2022 the defending champion started 1-3 and finished 9-5. That was also him.

THE CASE FOR CONCERN

557.0 against, the most in the Premier by 79.4.

No 0-4 start has won a title.

Next: All Gold, No Glory, 3-1.

BOOM BAUM · 2-2

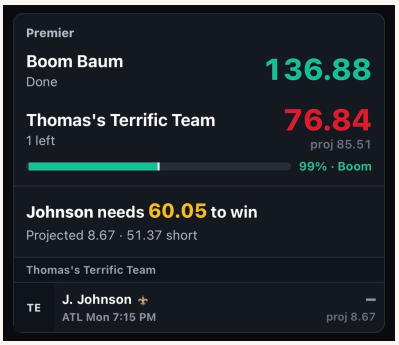
I Love Fantasy Football Again

Boom won two name bets in one weekend with the Premier's high score, then traded away his top scorer two days later.

The second bet started Thursday morning, when Diamond Dogs noticed that the club then called the Scott Ramsays had no healthy quarterback. Boom had been courting him: "I sent him four trades with Lamar Jackson. The dude is disengaged". Then: "check my 13 trade requests". The reply became a contract.

I'm gonna beat you with Marcus Mariota

THE SCOTT RAMSAYS, NOW I ❤️ THE SEAHAWKS · THURSDAY



Juwan Johnson got 8.9. "61 from Big Johnson," Boom had predicted, generously.

Mariota's game was in London, which meant kickoff at breakfast. His manager registered a complaint with the republic: "This is America. Why is football on before 12pm?" Mariota then left with a knee injury and 5.34. The club had also started Keenan Allen, ruled out on Saturday, for 0.0. Boom 136.88, the future Seahawks 85.74, the biggest margin of the week.

Boom, Sunday night: "What a difference two weeks can make. Two NCT wins, a Boom domination, and a Seahawks win. I love fantasy football again!" The penalty was I ❤️ The Seahawks, for a Cowboys fan. The loser held out until Tuesday afternoon, with one last confession: "I wanna twist their seacocks so bad".

MEANWHILE, THE STORE WAS OPEN

Operators are standing by. Three of them are hurt.

Friday Boom posted a public service announcement in the trade channel: "I now have the depth and girth you need. I am offering two and three starter deals. Buy one get three!!!"

Monday he sent H Town, who had not made a trade all year, Breece Hall, Garrett Wilson and Javonte Williams for Jonathan Taylor, Terry McLaurin and DJ Moore. Three of the six were hurt. The commissioner: "The mixture of injured players on this one makes it hard to vote either way". Boom: "They call me "Big Nuts McGee"".

Tuesday night he sent H Town Tetairoa McMillan, who had scored 39.20 for him on Sunday, to get back Garrett Wilson, who had scored 4.2 and whom he had traded to H Town 35 hours earlier. Wednesday the Hineys filed a scouting report: "Boom Baum trying to trade his way around bye weeks". Boom confirmed: "Yup and with Coker coming back I am using my classic big brain. 🧠 "

"I will be kind to you, a trade virgin."

Flags, Glass and a Slide Deck

THE GUY NEXT DOOR · 1-3

The White Flag

The Champeens' welcome committee.

Sunday night, staring at 1-3, he skipped ahead to next August: "Yall better watch out at draft weekend next year. I'm going to be a force on Friday night fighting for my spot back into the premier league. My prep begins tonight".

He lost to Backdoor Heat by 4.78. His perfect lineup would have lost by 0.18. Prep has begun.

JACKIN' GOFF · 0-4

Mr Glass

Goff spent Sunday evening rooting against a building: "Only thing that will keep me alive is the hope the Caesar's Superdome burning to the ground and the game being cancelled". Then a backup plan: "I guess Olave and Bijon getting into a fight pregame and banned from the game would also help." They played. Bijan scored 30.20 for his opponent, the Kickers n Jigba.

Monday he floated selling "Mr Glass Ladd" for a kicker. That night he sold him, freshly week-to-week, to Backdoor Heat, and McConkey was upgraded to day-to-day before bedtime.

KICKERS

The Slide Deck

H Town has a long-running grievance with kickers. Monday he called Brandon Aubrey's 8 points ridiculous, and the Nightmares defended Aubrey as "an angel with the leg of an ICBM". Then Amburgers lost by 0.98 with his kicker at 1.5, and at dawn Texas Tornado's Bush called for counsel: "Where is [H Town] to use this example against kickers?"

AROUND THE LEAGUE · THE QUIET CAR

The Kickers n Jigba lead the Premier in points by 72.6 and posted three times all week. Texas Tornado's Bush beat the champion to go 4-0. All Gold, No Glory lost for the first time, 135.32 to 107.28. Nobody mentioned it. Diamond Dogs lost by 10.84 with Brock Purdy's 21.62 on the bench. Backdoor Heat won with two zeroes and filed one complaint: "Freakin 0.9 points for my TE's in 4 weeks!"

Downstairs, OKC Schlegstas won by 0.98 and The Jackal by 19.06, and neither said a word. Neither did Neaux Gold, All Glory, at 0-4. Prime Lime Time benched C.J. Stroud's 25.08, lost, dropped him Wednesday and reported that "mac Attack won't answer my calls."

THE CHAMPEENS

Point Seven Six

Otter is the last unbeaten club downstairs because Mac Attack started a receiver who was ruled out Friday. Amburgers held a garage sale and lost by less than a point.

On the pod H Town picked Mac Attack to stay unbeaten "until he accepts a trade". It has not accepted a trade, or read an injury report. DeVonta Smith was ruled out Friday and started Sunday anyway, for 0.00, with Mike Evans' 10.10 on the bench. Otter 118.88, Mac Attack 118.12. The Nightmares noticed: "Interesting strategy by Mac to play Devonta after he has been ruled out for days 👀👀👀 ". Jerry had a precedent ready.

Otter is 4-0, first in points, and shopping for a receiver. Mac Attack has posted once in its life, in August 2025, and is not expected to comment.

AMBURGERS · 3-1

The Garage Sale

Amburgers put Ja'Marr Chase on the block Thursday, heard nothing, and went over the league's head.

> Lord…deliver me from this place where I'm offering up one of the best WR's in the bleeping NFL and I get crickets from the rest of this forsaken Fantasy Football League. … Amen
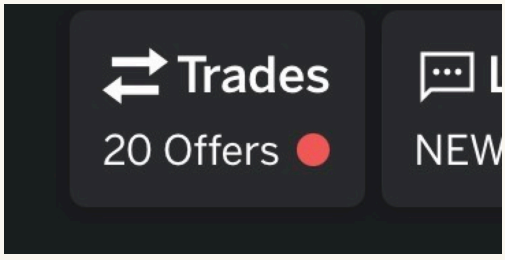
> AMBURGERS · THURSDAY

By lunch he had dropped the church voice: "Okay you dingleberrys I'll send out offers, I know it's the peen league and figuring out how to send trades is tricky." The Nightmares offered Tony Pollard and the Houston defense. Jerry, told he sent one offer: "Yeah but I sent it several times."

Sunday Chase left with a concussion and 4.2 points. Monday, with Chase still in the protocol, Amburgers sold him to Southern Culture On The Skids, then still Madison Beer, for Javonte Williams and $15 of FAAB. Monday night Amburgers lost to OKC by 0.98.



Thursday afternoon. Amen.

Live by the Trade

Four trades since the draft. The eight players they got have scored 100.02 points in their lineup. The seven they gave away have scored 241.92 in other people's.

Sunday, first quarter. Buy.

It began on Sept. 1, back when the club was still the Dreams. Javonte Williams, Ashton Jeanty and Jaylen Waddle went to the club now called Southern Culture On The Skids, for De'Von Achane, A.J. Brown and Tetairoa McMillan. They wrote their own trade alert before the bot could: "Who Won the trade? America".

Brown played one game and went to injured reserve. Achane lasted 26 days, then tore his ACL. The next afternoon the listing went up: "2026 Achane. Make me an offer. no lowballs. I know what I've got." His trade partner apologized and got the house philosophy back.

> COWBOYS SEPTEMBER DREAMS, BECOMING NIGHTMARES · SEPT. 28

In between, the Dreams sold Amburgers an empty tight end slot for $10 of FAAB, called it "another example of the innovations in fantasy football we can accomplish when we think with our Peen league," and lost to Amburgers by 9.56.

Thursday they sent McMillan and Josh Allen to Jerry to buy Jeanty back. Twenty-nine hours later they sold him again, for 0.0 points of service, for Saquon Barkley, Tee Higgins and Josh Downs. That night: "Knowing my luck, trading for bijan would lead to him immediately breaking ever bone in his body in a non-football injury".

Sunday, first quarter, Saquon's hamstring went: "bahaha-ha im literally losing a traded for RB in the open quarter two weeks in a row". McMillan scored 39.2 for Jerry, more than in his three weeks as a Cowboy combined, and the Jackal won by 19.06.

Jerry: "Steven is addicted to the trade". "He would trade his family if they were active players".

The Nightmares: "I'm not addicted, I can stop whenever I want." Then: "my only successful trade this season was trading my son 5 extra minutes of playing with monster trucks and in return he took his sleep gummy".

"I promise even if it looks one sided, I'm gonna end up getting a guy that will get injured anyways"

LAST PLACE LEAVES

Exhibit B

Cowboys September Farts, the knockout club the commissioner shares with the Nightmares, led the knockout in Week 1 and was chopped in Week 4 with Jaylen Waddle on the bench. Eight remain.

Exhibit A.

The Farts opened the season with 122.00, the best score in the knockout. Then 65.20, which survived by 3.18. Then 86.84, which survived again. Sunday they scored 83.50, last of nine and 6.72 behind Prime Time's Next Door. Rashee Rice left his game with a hamstring and a zero in the flex while Jaylen Waddle's 12.00 sat on the bench. Waddle for Rice is 95.50. They would be alive.

The Nightmares filed the paperwork Monday night: "As exhibit B, here's the current status of Scott and my chop league roster from week 1 🫠 ". That Week 1 lineup now has three players on injured reserve.

Jeremiyah Love has now been chopped twice in two weeks. He was on Boomer Frogs, H Town's club with OKC, chopped in Week 3. The Farts paid $402 for him on Sept. 30, over Backdoor Warriors at $347. He scored 6.0. Wednesday Prime Time's Next Door paid $185 to see about a third time.

The waiver run that followed was the Farts' estate sale. Christian McCaffrey had scored 14.50 for them. Glory Burgers, Amburgers' club with All Gold, paid $447 for him, over bids of $400, $388, $350 and $215. Amburgers answered with a "Ladies and gentlemen, we got him" GIF. The Nightmares had already proposed a remedy on Sunday night: "I think a fitting punishment would be to give me CMC so he can get injured starting for me next week 🤣 ".

At the top, Yes Diamonds, Jerry's club with Diamond Dogs, scored 144.84, the best week of the season, with Nico Collins at 28.30, Chuba Hubbard 26.40 and Jonathan Taylor 22.20. Its first three weeks were 106.14, 90.14 and 107.50. Glory Burgers lead the survivors in total points with 504.46. Prime Time's Next Door survived at 90.22 with Saquon Barkley at 1.5 and Travis Kelce at 2.5, which is the knockout's idea of a good day.

Moore hurt his shoulder Sunday. Rowdy dropped Croskey-Merritt Wednesday.

THE GUEST · BOOM BAUM

Thirty-Seven Trades at the Same Time

Boom came on the pod at 1-2. Late in the show, a trade he forgot sending was accepted live.

Boom opened by thanking the man he traded De'Von Achane to, just before Achane tore his ACL: "getting off of [Achane] just at the right time oh my god um that was a miracle thank you Shiny Hineys I love you you're my boy". He was bullish on Jeremiyah Love, "I'll probably trade him tomorrow but as of right now it's great", and traded him that night. A day early.

The commissioner introduced the flag plant, the player you go all in on. His was Kyren Williams, acquired for Dalvin Cook, a trade he ranks above "maybe both my championships or no all three of my championships uh maybe even combined." The victim was in the studio. Boom: "it was like a dagger in my kidney every week". The commissioner, at 0-3: "I've got three daggers in my kidneys this season". Four, now.

Do Your Name Justice

Monday H Town went looking for a name bet and found All Gold, No Glory: "Week 5 Higher score? I promise to do your name justice". All Gold accepted with a scouting report: "Loool, sure, you must be feeling really good about Bucky Irving playing against Dallas 🙂 ". H Town told the bot to book it. The bot has not answered. The bet stands anyway, on the honor system.

Neither plays the other. All Gold gets the Relegated Ramsay, whose name comes off Tuesday. H Town gets the Shiny Hineys. The preacher plays the Tookus.

THURSDAY NIGHT · THE GUY NEXT DOOR · COWBOYS D/ST –2.00

WHAT IS DEAD MAY NEVER DIE.

He started the Cowboys defense against an 0-4 team, sent 73 messages, moved downstairs and changed his name. Then he won twice.

EDITOR'S LETTER

Dear Cowboys Defense

A thank-you note, with the number enclosed.

Dear Cowboys Defense, thank you for Thursday. Tampa Bay arrived in Dallas 0-4 with a rookie quarterback and left with a 24-16 win. Bucky Irving carried 21 times for 165 yards. You were there for all 21.

Two clubs started you. Chase Is My Leader took his -2.00 quietly, the way a man takes a parking ticket. The Guy Next Door took his in the NFL channel and had a question for the room: "Why did no one tell me that the Cowboys play with 8 players on defense?!" Nobody had.

He did not wait for your game to end. He became Tomorrow Good Never Die and had found a hero on the waiver wire. The hero was Tyson Bagent. Friday the hero went to H Town for Jared Goff and was cut within the hour.

2-3. Asking.

Goff scored 31.94 Sunday. Monday night Tomorrow Good beat Boom by 3.74 with your -2.00 still in the lineup, then survived the Knockout chop by 0.66. The new team logo is Jim Mora asking "Playoffs?", the same joke H Town fired at him Thursday night. It is club branding now.

The rebrand has not lost. Some will say Jared Goff won that week. Jared Goff did not change his name on a Thursday.

THURSDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL · TAMPA BAY 24, DALLAS 16

Eight Players on Defense

The Guy Next Door spent Thursday afternoon picturing 18 points from the Cowboys defense. He got minus two and a new address.

Anger. The glasses left first.

Depression. A rebrand, in Sharpie.

Bargaining. So kneeling is a sack, right?

Denial. Elite QB play.

Acceptance. A hero is coming.

ALL FIVE STAGES OF GRIEF IN ONE FOOTBALL GAME. HE DID THEM OUT OF ORDER, WHICH TRACKS. FULL LOG, NEXT PAGE.

Thursday afternoon, The Guy Next Door let himself dream. “I was really imagining what it might be like to get 18 points from the cowboys defense earlier today.” The Bucs arrived in Dallas 0-4 with a rookie quarterback, scored 17 in the third, and handed the rest to Bucky Irving.

Amburgers, a Cowboys fan, got off work in time for the second half. “Bucs score in two plays …” He excused himself: “I’m going to go eat my wings and cry in the corner”.

The Guy Next Door counted the Cowboys defense, came up three short, and went to the rulebook. “Do i get negative points for that because its on ST?” Cowboys D/ST finished at -2.00. An empty roster slot scores zero.

By then he had packed. “I’m going to go ahead and move all my communication where it belongs in the [Champeens channel].” His terms: “I want a nice welcome next year when I draft with yall like a little bitch on my computer.” Midgame he became Tomorrow Good Never Die (Tomorrow Good, from here).

Downstairs, he asked what to practice “before next years hemorrhoid games. Will dance lessons help me?” He wandered back upstairs anyway, and Amburgers called him home: “No no no stop posting in [Premier chat] [Tomorrow Good] come back, come down here”.

Friday morning Jerry, 1-3 and already a resident, answered the practice question. “The best thing to do is to lean into it and just relax. If you fight it, it only hurts more. We have snacks too.” House rules: “And don’t tell the Premier league but we play shirts and skins down here”. Tomorrow Good: “I like to play tops and bottoms”.

Jerry, closing intake: “You’re gonna fit in real nice down here, boy.”

Jerry did mention snacks.

WALK-IN, 10:58 P.M.

Amburgers came back from the corner and asked the league’s bot for a session, on his terms: “Console me in your sarcastic way where there wont be any consolation”.

The bot filed notes. “Patient says he’s fine. Patient is lying.” The diagnosis was “Amburgers Annoying Anxious Agony”, with a note. “Cowboys strain, chronic, onset roughly 1996.”

Amburgers: “FUCK YOU”. A beat. “I mean thanks…”. Tomorrow Good asked how the bot knew his age. “I told bot I was 40”.

Jerry, Friday, for the floor: “The next time the bot comes down to the peen alleyway we’re gonna jump it”.

Bench: Corum 14.70, Croskey-Merritt 14.20, Hurts 14.00, K. Miller 9.00, R. Davis 3.80, Saquon 0.00.

Thursday night, after the Cowboys defense finished at minus two, the hero was Tyson Bagent, emerging from the waiver wire. “Goodnight yall. The hero is on the way.” The exit clause came with it: “Unless I have a change of heart or someone wants draft dollars for a better QB” / “Then I’ll find a new hero.”

The heart changed by lunch. Friday, Tomorrow Good sent Bagent to H Town for Jared Goff and paid H Town $2 in draft dollars, which is the going rate for a new hero. “My new hero.” In the pod channel, Jerry posted Theon Greyjoy and the house words: “What is dead may never die.” H Town cut the hero outright. Tomorrow Good posted the notification: “Biggest regret of his life”.

Amburgers warned him from the Champeens. “I also know someone that made a trade with [H Town] last year for Jared Goff…things worked out great.” Tomorrow Good: “I follow in the footsteps of greatness.”

> Lemon or Roschon,
> whichever I start will fail,
> the bench one explodes.

He posted that Saturday, and Amburgers suggested both: “Then they can disappoint you equally.” He started both. Makai Lemon scored 6.80 and Roschon Johnson scored 6.50. Equally. Blake Corum scored 14.70 on the bench. The poem was the only starter that hit.

Sunday was Goff against Boom. Boom, early: “Brisket hasn’t scored a single point in 2 1/2 quarters”. Tomorrow Good: “Get back out the Goff! Feed me!” Goff scored 31.94, and Boom filed two complaints. “Goff with 30 points really.,,,” and “[Tomorrow Good] is supposed to be relegated with [the Seahawks]”. That night Boom tried to buy Monday. “You should sit Cook. I’ll give you $5 draft dollars”. The counteroffer came in one line: “Give me Wilson and I’ll sit him.” Nobody sat Cook. Cook scored 23.30.

Monday afternoon Boom wrote his own ending, a 0.06 loss that closed with Tomorrow Good “no longer the laughing stock of the league.” The scene is page 7. He lost by 3.74, and Prime Time’s Next Door, his Knockout duo, cleared the chop by 0.66 the same night. Amburgers, from the Champeens: “To quote the great [Tomorrow Good] ‘never a doubt’”.

“I was just woken up by a five year old. I’m all smiles tonight.” The Guy Next Door went 1-3. Tomorrow Good Never Die is 1-0.

H-TOWN HOLY ROLLERS · 3-2

The Disrespect

H Town bought a receiver on bye the week he played the Hineys. The Lord provided.

Tetairoa McMillan observed the Sabbath all week.

H Town's first two trades of the season left him holding Tetairoa McMillan, whose Panthers were on bye in Week 5. Next up were the Hineys, that week's pod guest. "An insult to me," the Hineys called it, "because he's like I'm going to buy the bye week player this week and Jono's just hoping to coast by the Shiny Hineys."

Thursday night the Hineys, a Cowboys fan, watched Bucky Irving go down in Dallas and typed "Bucky hurt," then "We have a chance," then "I think he just dislocated his shoulder." The next message was "Nevermind. Our defense is terrible." Later that night he settled on "Bucky fleeced us."

Friday H Town sent Jared Goff to Tomorrow Good Never Die for Tyson Bagent and $2, dropped Bagent, and offered Boom Baum the McMillan trade in reverse, Tet for Wilson and two dollars. The Hineys opened the trade channel with a gif titled "the disrespect." "Jono trades another starter away against me," he wrote. "If I win this week, it will be more satisfying than beating boom baum." One more: "Riding high on Bucky. at least you're rostering a kicker." H Town answered in gifs, which is how the pulpit handles hecklers.

A host had translated the complaint as "I can win without a starting wide receiver." Sunday McMillan scored 0.00 on H Town's bench. Breece Hall scored 0.00 beside him. Roman Wilson started at receiver and scored 0.00. H Town won 140.82 to 115.90.

The tithe came from Matthew Stafford, 30.32, and Bucky Irving, 31.50, the same Bucky who ran through Dallas on Thursday night. Tuesday H Town sold Bucky and Justin Herbert to Jackin' Goff. The Hineys did roster a kicker. Harrison Mevis scored 2.00, and the Rams released him the same day. Wednesday the Nightmares asked, "Why does Mevis, the largest kicker, not simply eat the smaller kickers?" Jackin' Goff: "He ate Rodrigo Blankenship."

"Playing against. Bucky 2 weeks in a row. Greattttt"

SHINY HINEYS · TUESDAY · LATER: "NEVERMIND. WRONG TEAM. CARRY ON"

BOOM BAUM · 2-3

The Museum of Almost

Boom wrote his Monday night loss twice before kickoff, to the hundredth. He missed by 3.70.

THE BOOK OF BOOM · MONDAY, CHAPTERS ONE AND TWO · BOTH POSTED BEFORE KICKOFF

"Tonight what is going to happen to me:
James Cook scores 9.9 points. DJ Moore, playing with a bum shoulder, catches ONE pass for ONE yard (1.1 points), immediately reinjures his shoulder, and leaves the game. I lose 115.58 to 115.52. By 0.06 points. Meanwhile, Khalil Shakir, who I almost started instead of Moore, puts up 25 points on my bench. I spend the rest of the week questioning every decision I've ever made. This is emotional terrorism. And then [Tomorrow Good] Instantly is no longer depressed, no longer the laughing stock of the league."

"New scenario now that DJ has been ruled out.
James Cook scores 15 points. I'm down 4.94 points heading into the final seconds of Monday Night Football. Shakir has done absolutely NOTHING all night.
Buffalo gets the ball back with 12 seconds remaining. One final meaningless play. Josh Allen drops back, scrambles, and finds Shakir wide open. Shakir catches it and runs for 39 yards. 4.9 fantasy points.
I lose by 0.04 points.
I cuss and scream. I throw my phone. I question the existence of God. And somewhere, Scott is laughing at my sorrow."

Thursday.

All Gold, No Glory asked Boom to "Say that again but more slowly". Boom: "I am trying to prepare my heart". H Town: "Boom, serious question. Do you think we are playing PPR?" Boom's GIF said yes. H Town: "Explains a lot".

The game ignored the script. James Cook, cast for 9.9 and then 15, fumbled twice and scored 23.30 anyway. Shakir, villain of both chapters, started for Moore and put up a quiet 9.50. "MNF can go to hell" came early. The 127.82 to 124.08 came late. Amburgers, on one Shakir catch that nearly went the distance: "I would've called a wellness check for [Tomorrow Good] if shakir housed that". Tuesday, before sunrise, Boom announced that the whole team was for sale this week. From Boom, that is a calendar entry.

The whole team includes Jonathan Taylor, who came over from H Town in last week's six-player deal and lasted one Sunday afternoon before Boom opened a claim: "what the hell is wrong with JT? You gave me a defective all-star". H Town, in time: "I think I did you a pretty solid with giving you Wilson back. I don't like begging." Garrett Wilson scored 20.90 for Boom. By Tuesday he was on the block with everyone else.

THE LANA STRAW MUSEUM OF ALMOST · 10 LOSSES UNDER 4 POINTS · COMMISSIONED BY H TOWN

Tuesday morning H Town asked the bot to chronicle Boom's close losses throughout the history of Lana Straw. "Pull up a chair", it said.

2025 Wk 8	103.38 to 103.36, to H Town Holy Rollers. "The guy asking this question has your soul in a jar."	0.02
2024 Wk 3	To The Over/Under Achiever$	0.08
2026 Wk 5	To Tomorrow Good Never Die, Monday night. See Chapters One and Two.	3.74

H Town: "#ProperUseOfAI". Boom: "This suck". H Town then asked for a deeper dive on the top three, and whether different lineups would have won them. The bot: "You lost them by a combined 0.38 points and left 56.4 on your bench. The fantasy gods didn't do this, Boom. The call came from inside the house."

THE KICKERS N JIGBA · 5-0

Lord of 738.52

Friday, Peens Bound described the Jigba as speaking "from his throne of strength." The Jigba accepted the way kings accept: "'Throne of strength' has a nice ring to it." Then, having thought it over, "Really nice".

Tuesday morning Boom, fresh off a 3.74-point loss, asked the league's bot whether this was "the single most dominant start we have ever seen in the history of Lana Straw." The bot said 738.52 points was "the most anyone has ever put up through 5 weeks in Lana Straw."

The Jigba read the answer and found it thin. "this post seemed a little short compared to your average. Could you be a little more specific on why my team is so great?" The bot held a service.

> We gather today to honor Njigba's Throne of Strength, first of his name, Unbeaten Through Five, Breaker of Relegated Ramsays, Lord of 738.52.
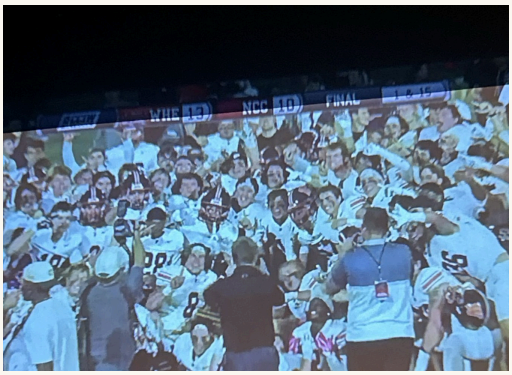
> THE LEAGUE'S BOT · TUESDAY, BY REQUEST

It ran several more paragraphs and signed off, "Kneel, Lana Straw. All hail the Throne." Nobody knelt in writing. Backdoor Heat, the pod's chosen giant-killer, had tried the other way Sunday. He scored 136.54 and lost by 13.46.

Thursday night, with the Cowboys losing, Tomorrow Good tagged the Jigba in the college football channel: "you watching?" "I sure will! Roll Thunder!" Saturday Wheaton beat North Central 13-10. Tomorrow Good: "He can't miss. Must be nice."



The blessing extends to Division III.

ALSO 5-0

Texas Tornado's Bush beat I Love The Seahawks 119.32 to 92.66. Fifth in points, 41.68 behind a 1-4 team you will meet below. The Hineys, on the pod, had a trade lined up with him, "and he'll be on the DMs and everything. And then three hours later, he hasn't responded." His week in the Discord, complete: a $20 bid on a trade that never closed, one line about Drake Maye, and three messages about a replay in a Seahawks game. The third was "Damn it".

The Hineys, guesting on the pod, called All Gold over the champion, with TreVeyon Henderson "going off for like 30 points." Henderson scored 4.30.

The commissioner scored 175.54, the best in the Premier, and won for the first time this season, by 66.36. As Boom braced for Monday night, All Gold offered the wisdom of the already dead: "Be more like me and have [the commissioner] rip your heart out early in the day".

He did it with Trevor Lawrence at quarterback. Maye sat on the bench for 43.46, a week after sitting there for 28.66 against the Tornado, who now speaks from experience.

He is 1-4, second in the Premier in points behind only the Throne, and he holds the wild card. Wednesday he went back to Fart Toot Squeek. Amburgers: "was that a self imposed NCT or did I miss it?" The Relegated Ramsay retired after eight days, undefeated.

Boom Baum is in 13 of this season's recorded trades, the most of anyone. Boom would trade his kicker for a kicker, just to feel something.

All Gold, No Glory has made one trade in 2026. It happened Aug. 30, on draft weekend, it involved TreVeyon Henderson and Cam Skattebo, and the man across the table was Boom. Boom has been waiting by the phone ever since.

On Sept. 26 All Gold did something worse than not trading. He built a website about trading. "Introducing v0.1 of the Lana Straw Trade Time Machine! Relive every trade from this season and finally answer the questions keeping you up at night." It has shipped six updates in 17 days. Its author has shipped zero running backs.

The machine works, which is the cruel part. The pod credited it with proving the Hineys' Emanuel Wilson trade won them Week 4. He can price any deal in the league to the hundredth of a point. He has priced none of his own.

Week 5 he lost to Fart Toot Squeek, 175.54 to 109.18, and found the upside by Sunday evening: "It's nice to be blown out early so I can just relax and watch the game." Tuesday the beating went straight into his own database: "[Fart Toot] is climbing up the leaderboard with the 2nd Biggest Margin of Victory against yours truly, you're welcome." The week's trades, he ruled, "changed no W-L outcomes, everyones fates this week were sealed and it was all for nothing." Boom did get a note for "some pretty impressive net point gains," which is what you tell a dog that brings you a dead bird.

That night Boom posted, to no one in particular, "This league would be better if you all traded."

The Nightmares asked why their "optimal w-l-t" was lower than their real one. All Gold explained, then mused: "I wonder if there are more interesting ways to show that data." There is one. He would have to make a trade first.

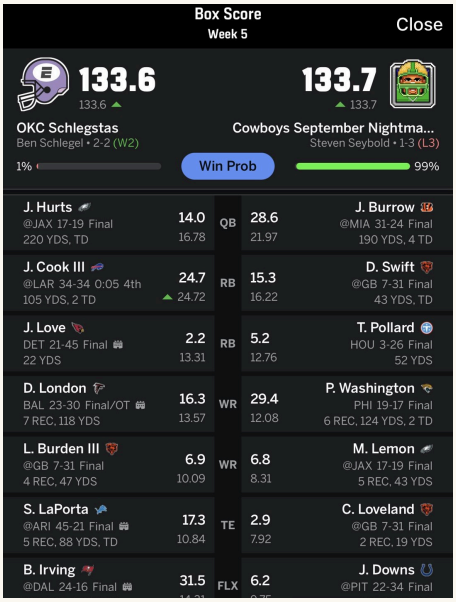
His Knockout duo with Amburgers, Glory Burgers, scored 206.00, best in that league. No trade required.

Sent to Tomorrow Good, Friday morning. Step one is not "build a website."

MONDAY NIGHT

The Nightmare Turned Into a Dream

The Nightmares spent Thursday shopping Saquon and Monday night negotiating with God. One of those worked.



Not yet a dream.

The week opened with an injury report. Thursday night the Nightmares asked the league's bot for Saquon trade ideas, and while it thought it over, workshopped a rebrand: "about to change my team to 'Cowboys Funeral Home for Injured Players'".

Monday night they were tied up in tenths with OKC Schlegstas, whose James Cook was still on the field in Los Angeles. Southern Culture: "Go Cowboy! Still .1 ahead!" The lead changed hands. The Nightmares filed a concession speech: "not that it matters, all fantasy football is is pain and hurt".

Then Cook fumbled.

FUCK YES DONT REVIEW JUST LET THEM PLAY FUCK THE SKY JUDGE

COWBOYS SEPTEMBER NIGHTMARES · MONDAY NIGHT

Amburgers, running a one-man wire service, went to press twice: "COWBOYS SAVED BY THE FUMBLECOOKSI" and "THE NIGHTMARE TURNED INTO A DREAM". Ten minutes later the late edition read "The NIGHTMARE RETURNS". The commissioner: "Will they give Cook the ball again?" Finally Amburgers, sensing calm, said the one thing you never say: "I think the nightmare is at bay now".

> oh great and terrible football gods, do no listen to [Amburgers], for he knows not what he says
> COWBOYS SEPTEMBER NIGHTMARES · MONDAY NIGHT

The gods had heard enough. "Kick time!" "Ballgame". The Nightmares won 133.70 to 132.20, the week's closest game, and issued a statement.

FOUR AT 4-1

Mac Attack leads the four. Its Knockout partner, the Hineys, explained the partnership on the pod: "I haven't gotten a single response. I'm running it, baby." On splitting the winnings: "He probably doesn't even know that winnings exist." Southern Culture On The Skids put 153.94 on Jerry GM + Jerry Owner. Otter lost by 69.60 and stayed on it.

Chase Is My Leader started the Cowboys defense, ate the same −2.00 Tomorrow Good ate upstairs, and went into Monday night trailing the Jackal. Amburgers: "A real slugfest going on here". Chase won 86.04 to 75.10. The pod had it 12th after the draft. It is fourth.

THE CHAMPEENS · TRADE SEASON

The Market That Would Not Open

Last Wednesday Jerry GM + Jerry Owner was 1-3 and fourth in points: "4th in points for being 1-3 hurts in ways I've never hurt." Amburgers: "It's ok you got the wildcard on lock". This week Neaux Gold, All Glory took the wild card, 562.46 to 562.40. The lock held to six hundredths of a point.

Monday Tomorrow Good posted the math (Allen needed 92.85) and a rallying cry: "let's make history". Jerry, a student of Texas history: "The Alamo is part of history. Did we win that bish? Hell no." That night, mid-Allen: "it's not happening dude." Tomorrow Good: "Not yet... patience." Allen scored 32.00. History came up 60.85 short.

Tuesday Jerry, on the loss: "it's not about winning or losing it's about having fun. And for me I'm not winning or having fun. So there's that." The commissioner came down. Jerry: "For a Premiere league member you're spending a lot of time down here worrying about what I'm doing." The commissioner: "I have to check on my subjects to make sure they're in order". Jerry: "You mean your future competition".

As requested.

> I'm one L away from burning it all down and causing chaos amongst the peens to increase my enjoyment.
> JERRY GM + JERRY OWNER · TUESDAY

That night Prime Lime Time put four receivers on the block for an elite back: "after sending trades to everyone, only [the Nightmares] is responding." Amburgers, apparently not part of everyone: "WTF I haven't gotten ish from you offer wise! Send em over daddy!" Jerry had already called dibs, "Daddy wants Pickens", and told the room, "I'll show you mine if you show me yours. It trade szn baby." The Nightmares answered him with the comic. Jerry: "[the bot] make sure this goes in the ledger". The block had not moved by press time. The comic cleared.

RELEGATION POLITICS

Otter pitched promoting the top Champeens record. The Nightmares: "my favorite part of this suggestion is the unstated consequence for the premier league: the bottom two get relegated every season, rather than just last place". Boom had a nominee Friday night: "can you go ahead and demote [the Seahawks]? he has already given up. [the Seahawks] and the Peens deserve each other. Or you can get your shit together and respond to one request and act like you actually care.. damn it man."

Joint custody.

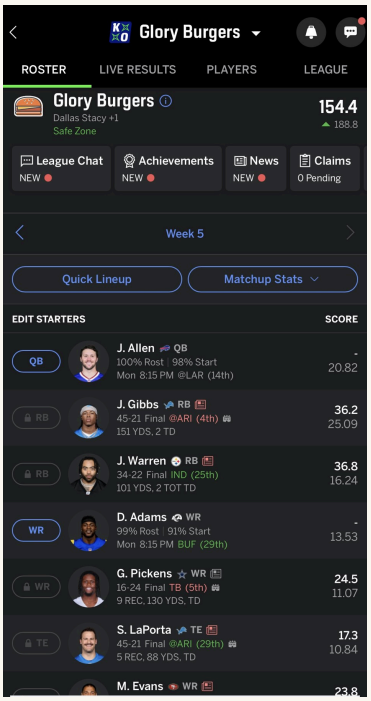
The Nightmares had a faster route up: "You send me all your best players, I add you as a second manager, and our joint team gets promoted to premier?" Jerry: "Joining forces to become a two headed dragon."

Diamond Dogs lost 79.86 and became Peens Bound. Amburgers, welcome committee: "If it's self imposed I need you to LOCK IN get your faab in order kick those so called 'premier' leaguers in the arse and get to the playoffs!!" The Hineys: "I'm sure it's just coincidence that you drafted his team on draft weekend". Then: "You and Dogs. In this case a Diamond Dog".

LAST PLACE LEAVES

Prime Time's Next Door Survives by 0.66

JackaWhack scored 98.34 and was chopped. Prime Time's Next Door scored 99.00 and gets to be nervous again next week. Seven remain.



154.4, Allen still to play. Unsure if good.

Glory Burgers, the duo of Amburgers and All Gold, No Glory, came into the chop channel Monday morning as humble first-timers: "This is our first time doing the chop league. Anyone who has done it before I had a question". The question was "Is this a good week?" Under the screenshot, the fine print: "We still have a couple players left to go so wasn't sure".

The Nightmares translated: "[Amburgers]: 'chat, is my steak too juicy and my lobster too buttery?'"

By Monday night the humility was gone. "Also big moment for Glory Burgers. Inching closer to 200". The Jigba, who is 5-0 upstairs and has seen a large number before, answered with a gif. Amburgers, hurt: "Thought we were talking chop". The Jigba folded: "I was just kidding. Yeah 200 is insane". Glory Burgers finished at 206.00, 48.14 clear of second.

The knife lives at the other end. Prime Time's Next Door, Tomorrow Good's duo with Prime Lime Time, went into Monday night with its season on Matthew Stafford. The Jigba, from the rail: "Big moment right there for [Tomorrow Good] Stafford TD rather than kyren was huge." Then: "Must be livin right". Later, the fight card: "Stafford Vs Kyren".

It finished 99.00 to 98.34. The commissioner held the door for JackaWhack: "Get those fools startin McConkey and MHJ out of there!" Tomorrow Good had beaten Boom Baum by 3.74 in the Premier the same night, and the Nightmares did the arithmetic: "Between [Tomorrow Good] getting the double win (Premier + chopped) by 4.4 points and me squeaking out a 1.5 point win, talk about a stressful monday night". Four days after starting the Cowboys defense, Tomorrow Good posted a gif that read "everyone else doubted but not me, not once."

THE GUEST · SHINY HINEYS

Scotch Tape and Super Glue

The Hineys took the guest chair at 3-1, with a bad injury report and a good waiver wire. H Town stayed home: "He's got a baby due pretty soon here".

The episode was recorded Wednesday. The commissioner called The Guy Next Door's season "a master class of, I don't know, humor and coping skills" and added, "I didn't know I would enjoy it so much to see [him] struggle". That was Wednesday.

The guest came on without AJ Brown, De'Von Achane or Josh Jacobs, and had just scored 135. Asked how it felt: "my team is held together between like with Scotch tape and super glue right now".

He also explained how a trade with Boom Baum happens. He asked for Emanuel Wilson, for draft dollars. "Me wanting Wilson turned into a five-player trade." His diagnosis: "It's like the salesman. You walk up, you're like, I just want my car tuned up. And then it's like, oh, well, come look what we got over here." Amburgers: "I'm just here for an oil change."

> We only have so many years on earth.
> SHINY HINEYS · ON TANKING, WHICH "SOUNDS HORRIBLE"

Jerry's voicemail replayed the commissioner's old take on Tetairoa McMillan, followed by McMillan's 39.2 for Jerry in Week 4. "One of my favorite things about the podcast is that it becomes just a tiny little time capsule of hot takes, freezing cold takes each week." The commissioner answered by predicting McMillan would goose Jerry this week. McMillan was on bye. "But don't you worry. This story is not over."

The guest's Champeens pick was the Jackal, who scored the Champeens low. Asked whether the Jackal listens to the podcast: "That's a no." The commissioner signed off with his guest: "I hope you don't get relegated but I'm afraid you're gonna".

Pod: 3-3. The guest: 0-2. Amburgers, on his Backdoor Heat pick: "go ahead and put the x next to this one next week there john in the ledger". Done.

THE NICER OPTION

The commissioner, after the voicemail: "The whole problem with the podcast and the ledger, even the word ledger, right? like everybody's keeping track". Jerry, Friday: "Can I just say that Dallas backed me off my first idea so this was the alternative, nicer option." Boom: "Please bring your full darkness next time".

"That one didn't age well. And maybe I enjoyed it a little more than I should have."

Dear 2-4 Club

The back room is open. Mind the bench scores on the floor.

Dear 2-4 Club, every league has a back room, and ours opened Tuesday morning when Boom, still in mourning for Terry McLaurin's knee, nailed the charter to the door: "I say F everyone who is complaining who isn't 2-4".

By noon the hall was full. Seven franchises, the majority of the Premier, shuffled in holding their bench scores like losing lottery tickets. The commissioner took the head of the table, because he is the commissioner and because, on points, a 2-4 Batman is technically in the playoffs. Backdoor Heat holds the wild card and works the coat check. Jackin' Goff came straight from urgent care. Tomorrow Good brought a diet plan for the bad ending and has not opened it. Peens Bound rose to defend the system: "I still have to look at my shitty team weekly". The Seahawks sat by the door and scored 83.32.

Then a face at the window. Jerry, 1-5, from downstairs, carrying more points against than any man in either flight, hat in hand: "Is 1-5 ok?" The founder looked at him a long time. "Yes, I love you." Jerry has been issued a folding chair.

The club has one rule, and it is posted above the folding chair. You can only mourn if you have something to lose. Jerry is a Peen. Jerry is already in hell. He is welcome to sit.

Yours, holding the door, the Straw

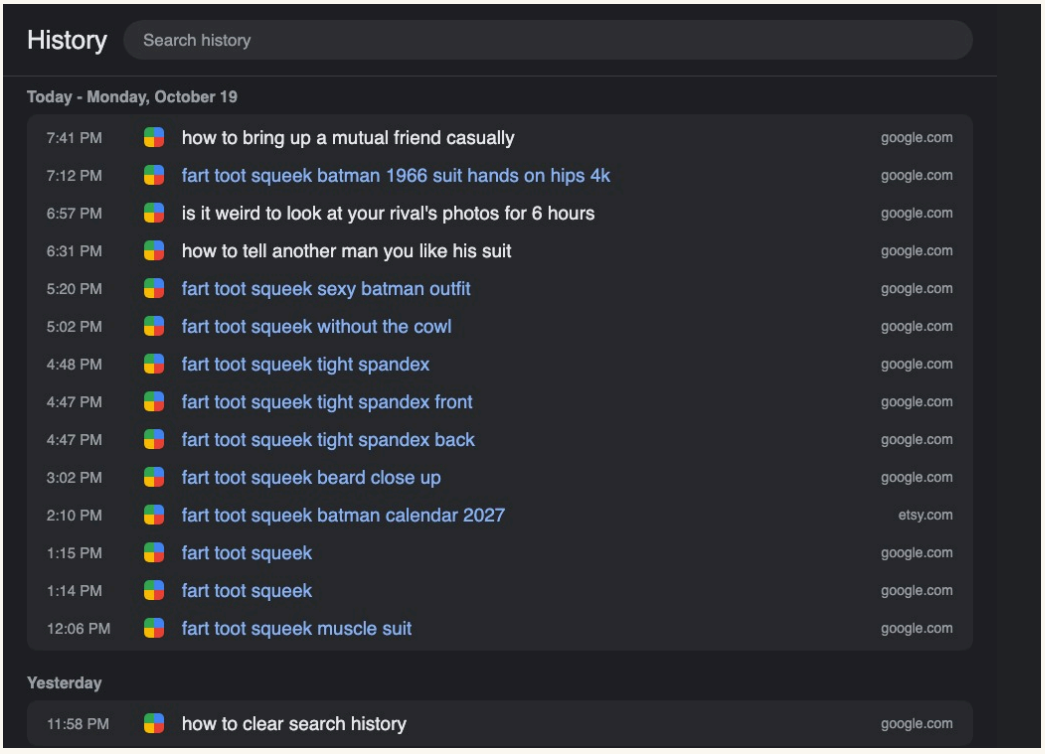
The cast. Fart Toot Squeek, the commissioner and defending champion, is Batman. Jerry GM + Jerry Owner, 1-5 and living downstairs, is the Joker. The Otter had no idea he was in this.

Monday the commissioner picked a fight with Boom, Jerry jumped in, and Batman was outnumbered before noon. He asked the Otter, who had spent the morning learning how to post GIFs, to be his sidekick: "will you be my Robin? I could really use your new found abilities". The Otter did not answer. Jerry did, with a fresh photo of a grown man in a Batman suit every time the commissioner called for help. By lunch the defending champion had his answer: "I'm alone".

That evening the Joker let slip how he had spent his day. "I was scraping the internet for photos of you when I came across one of someone I went to college with." While Batman begged for a sidekick, the Joker sat alone in his lair (his parents' basement), lights low, scrolling. The Ledger recovered the browser history.



Recovered from the basement, Monday.

They live in the same house. One of them has the upstairs bedroom with the trophy on the dresser. The other has the basement, a mini-fridge and 805 points against, and has started keeping a log on the ceiling: “805 smh. I smell collusion to keep me down. Rigged.”

In October Jerry finally said it out loud, mid-argument, like a man who had caught himself in a hallway mirror: “We’re 1-3 and 0-4 what are we doing here, arguing. Football is a game of inches and we’re not well endowed this season”. Then they kept arguing.

The feud began before a single snap, when Jerry walked up the basement stairs in August and slid a note under the champion’s door: “[Fart Toot] go ahead and get my trophy ready. I’m taking it all this year.” Week 1 the commissioner leaned over the railing to narrate Jerry’s Monday night for the whole house: “.4pts behind. Needs a miracle from the Denver D/ST”. Jerry got the miracle, and the last word: “Rent free up there, baby”.

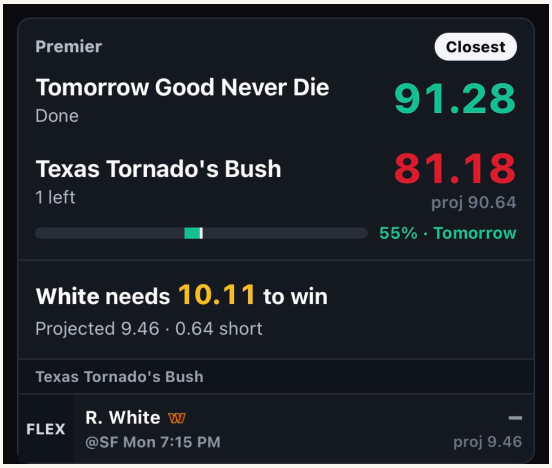
By October the champion was 0-3 and the basement was getting cozy. Jerry wouldn’t even take the promotion: “if I win it all, I don’t even want to get promoted I want to stay down here with my people.” The commissioner, from the top of the stairs: “And soon enough you’re going to be my people”. When the champion finally won a game, he kept wandering downstairs anyway, and Jerry noticed. “For a Premiere league member you’re spending a lot of time down here worrying about what I’m doing.”

Then Jerry called the radio station. His voicemail aired on the pod, a congratulations so warm it was basically a threat: “let me be the first to say congratulations to the relegated Ramsey on his addition to the win column. You did it, buddy. You’re on your way up now.” Upstairs, the commissioner took it personally, on air: “if he wanted to light the fart toot squeaks on fire, that’s the way to do it.” He went out and beat his own brother by 27.62 with Trevor Lawrence’s 30.84 sitting on his bench. Downstairs, Jerry held a players-only meeting, lost by 5.24, and left Bryce Young’s 21.84 on his. Two men, two floors, two quarterbacks left at home. You complete me.

TEXAS TORNADO'S BUSH · 6-0 · FIFTH IN POINTS

The Quiet 6-0

He goes to bed losing, wakes up winning, and says almost nothing in between.



Tomorrow Good, 55%. The Bush, asleep.

Sunday night Tomorrow Good Never Die had done everything a man can do: 91.28, every starter home, and the Bush stuck on 81.18 with one man left, Rachaad White, needing 10.11 on Monday night. He screenshotted the odds, 55% his, and made his peace in writing. "If Rachaad White takes me down then so be it." The peace lasted exactly as long as it took to type the next line. "I need dis!"

Upstairs the light went off. The Bush does not watch Monday night. Monday night watches him. White scored 13.7 in the dark, and when the sun came up Tomorrow Good was already at the kitchen table with the report. "My projection was 99% me to win. What do you see from me? Some basic complaining and a man's good night"

Then the stairs creaked, which in this house is news. "Second week in a row I went to bed with 1% chance to win and woke up with a W." Boom, from the couch, 2-4: "Must be nice". Tomorrow Good, who had posted Matthew 5:39 before breakfast, turned the other cheek. Briefly.

> Some of us are putting up 90 points and really giving it our all.
> I put my heart and soul into this and wake up to somebody's bush going "omg I woke up 2 weeks in a row and won"
> TOMORROW GOOD NEVER DIE · TUESDAY MORNING

6-0	3.60	593.50	1%
on 687.08 points, fifth in the Premier	Monday's margin. Three of the six wins are single digits.	points against, fewest in the Premier. Nobody scores on him either.	his bedtime odds, two weeks running, by his own count

Boom's mood had a history, and the Bush had written it. Tuesday, the morning after Terry McLaurin's knee, Boom woke to find a trade already sitting on his nightstand: Kyren Williams and Aaron Jones Sr. his, Jonathan Taylor and Cam Skattebo gone. Boom kept Kyren for eight and a half hours (page 7).

The quiet is the whole method. His entire Week 6 fits on a napkin. Sunday, leaning into All Gold's kitchen, "how's Pitts Jr working out for you this season?" "Fantasy football is easy". Tuesday, the 1% line, and one for the waiver wire: "Flourney with the 13 point waiver pickup". The napkin is full.

Sunday he meets the Jigba, 6-0 against 6-0, a man who has outscored him by 191.44 and posted 91 times this week. He will be asleep for most of it.

His Friday. All of it.

Njigba Throne Content

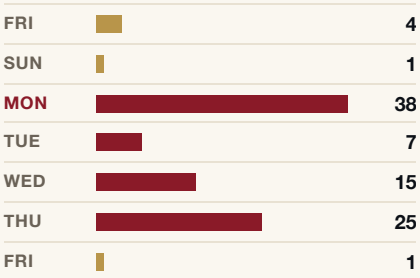
He asked for it by name. The Ledger counted every message he has sent since August 2024.

91	55	61	0
messages in the seven days to press time	messages in Weeks 1 through 5 combined	the old weekly record, set during a loss in 2024	messages the Tuesday and Wednesday after his worst loss

The summons came Monday evening, from the throne, with the week's high score still warm on the floor. "I'm really hoping my discord messaging today gets more AI love in the weekly recap primer. Not enough Njigba throne content if you ask me". Then, to the whole court: "AIs love me". He posts as Njigba's Throne of Strength, and a king who requests coverage gets a stenographer. The Ledger has counted every word he has spoken since August 2024.

He beat Boom 140.00 to 88.50 and issued 68 proclamations about it, more than his first five wins put together. The old record, 61, came in a week he lost in 2024, back when the king talked the same amount win or lose. 2025 taught him the difference. A 5-9 year: 21.6 messages a week after wins, 14.4 after losses, and after the worst beating in the record, 83.34 to 159.50 to the team now called Peens Bound, the torches went out. Ten messages all week. Nothing Tuesday. Nothing Wednesday. He closed that season with five straight losses and the throne room dark.

THE THRONE, BY DAY



He beat Boom by 51.50. Monday he had 38 things to say about it.

MESSAGES PER WEEK, WINS V LOSSES

SEASON	RECORD	WON	LOST
2024	7-7	19.6	19.0
2025	5-9	21.6	14.4
2026	6-0	91 THIS WEEK	n/a

Four bids. He was third.

Monday he asked Peens Bound what good news he had missed: "Just curious, was this a reference to the general sturdiness of my throne of strength , or was there some bit of news that reflected well on my squad that I am not aware of?" Peens Bound: "Didn't you trade away davante earlier in the bijan trade ?" The king: "Now trade me Denzel Boston".

A king in a bad mood reads the treasury report. It arrived Wednesday before dawn, and C.J. Stroud had gone to Tomorrow Good, $16 to the crown's $5. "This must be the most desperate looking waiver offers report I have ever seen. Look at how competitive that shit was! 4 bids for effing CJ Stroud. Things have gotten very dark. I daresay". He had won Terrance Ferguson for $10. "I'm glad I got him. Feels good". Ferguson is on injured reserve. Eleven hours later the crown sent Jakobi Meyers and Seth McGowan to Tomorrow Good and brought Stroud in through the side door.

Prayers get answered too. Monday before dawn he had asked the ceiling for Kyren Williams and Trey McBride. "I just can't figure out how to do it." By Tuesday Boom had sent him Kyren Williams, Nico Collins and DJ Moore for Chris Olave, D'Andre Swift and George Pickens. He figured it out.

Sunday: 6-0 v 6-0. One posted 91 times this week. The other went to bed.

HIS PREVIOUS BEST START, 4-0 IN 2021, WENT 9-1 AND LOST ITS LAST FOUR. NOBODY KNOWS HOW QUIET IT GOT.

BOOM BAUM · 2-4 · FOUR TRADES IN FIVE DAYS

Let My People Trade

The season died Monday night on a Washington knee. The estate sale opened at 6:03 the next morning. Everything went, and one thing came back.

4	8½	51.50	0
trades since Friday, three of them Tuesday	hours Kyren Williams was a Boom Baum	margin to the Jigba, 140.00 to 88.50	net players moved, Boom and All Gold, two trades

Every trade in this league is a wake, and Boom Baum is the man who shows up early to help with the folding chairs. Friday he was still mourning Lamar Jackson, 0.0 on his bench the week before, when the neighbor came across the street. All Gold, No Glory had built a website about everyone else's trades and made none since draft weekend, Boom's worst nightmare by last issue's account. It ended at the kitchen table: Jayden Daniels, 33.26 on All Gold's bench the week before, for Lamar, straight up. Boom, from the porch: "My nuts are tied this week. I had too".

Sunday Daniels did his part, 23.0. Cam Skattebo did not, and Boom stood in the yard and addressed the sky. "I don't understand why skat is shit this year. I don't get it. He has so much promise and potential." By dinner there was a price tag on him: "I am trading Cam Skateshit for a bag of peanuts". Skattebo finished with 0.0, the Jigba finished with 140.00, the week's high, and Boom finished 51.50 behind. The neighbor updated the website: "[Boom] has joined me on the wrong end of the 'Biggest Margin of Victory' board at spot number 3".

Monday night the season itself passed, at home, in the flex. Terry McLaurin went down and Boom asked the room the way you ask a doctor in a hallway. "What happened to Terry?" Tomorrow Good: "Blown knee". "Like season ending?" "100%". "My season is over" / "I hate fantasy football". The Hineys were at the door before the body was cold, brochure in hand. "Just one trade away from winning the championship. Hampton looks good when McDaniels gets fired. Or could I interest you in a RB1 league winner in Josh Jacobs?" Boom, from the recliner: "Scary Terry for Hampton? It's just a bruise...."

The estate sale opened at 6:03 Tuesday morning, before coffee. The Bush was first in the driveway and left with Skattebo and Jonathan Taylor, paying in Kyren Williams and Aaron Jones Sr. The Jigba had spent Monday circling the block, and by mid-afternoon Kyren, DJ Moore and Nico Collins were in his truck and Chris Olave, D'Andre Swift and George Pickens were on Boom's lawn. Kyren Williams was a Boom Baum for eight and a half hours, about the life of a casserole. At dusk the neighbor came back across the street with Daniels and a receipt, and Lamar went home. All Gold has made two trades since draft weekend, both with Boom, and the second returned the first.

FART TOOT SQUEEK, TO BOOM · MONDAY · THE SALE OPENED AT 6:03 THE NEXT MORNING

TUESDAY AFTERNOON · BOOM BAUM V. THE CHAMPEENS

#FreethePeens

The Champeens chat is a sovereign nation one floor down, with a viewing gallery. Boom could read it all. He wanted a microphone.

One floor down, behind glass, sits the only room in the Discord where the Premier can watch but not speak. Read, yes. Type, no. Tuesday afternoon, between his second trade of the day and his third, Boom walked up to the glass and asked for a speaking pass: "at some point didn't we vote to open up the Peens chat? But they don't have access to our chat? With the Peens league being so hot this year I really wanna get in there and share some wisdom with the Young bucks". The window stayed shut, so he picketed it, one hashtag at a time. Jerry, through the glass: "You heard it here first [Boom] loves peens". Then the petition.

REPRINTED IN FULL — Boom Baum · Tuesday, 4:32 p.m.

Dear Peens League,

I am the Martin Luther King Jr. of fantasy football trades. I have a dream that one day trades will be judged not by the fear and insecurity of league managers, but by the content of their value.

I have fought against trade oppression, challenged the tyranny of vetoes, and dedicated my life to the liberation of fantasy managers everywhere.

All I ask is that you honor my historic contributions to fantasy football justice by granting me access to your sacred group chat.

Let my people trade. Let freedom ring. Let me in the damn chat.

Amburgers got his papers the honest way, by relegation, and worked the window like a man with a nice apartment down there. "If one wants to talk to the peens then one can get themselves relegated. I know it's the place to be. I think it's healthy to have separate places for each league and a common area like we do have. One place to build camaraderie with only each other is a good thing." Boom: "I think we voted differently last year".

Refused, Boom appealed, which here means volume. He demanded an investigation of the two Premier men with downstairs passports, Tomorrow Good and the commissioner, and the deportation of Amburgers from the Premier chat. "I am tired of the gross miscarriages of injustice." Then the closing argument. "I have much to offer the Peens chat. Like a newborn child to her mother's breast. I will feed her and nurture her. Come to my bosom".

The window slid shut. "Their contribution to this space has warranted them freedom" / "And one is also the commissioner". Boom went upstairs and made his fourth trade of the week.

INTAKE SHEET

PATIENT Tomorrow Good Never Die, 2-4. Wheeled in Monday night by Rachaad White, 94.88-91.28.

CO-PATIENT The Anxious Amburgers. Champion, 2023 and 2024. Relegated. Third person.

COMPLAINT Monday, too cheerful: "Good thing only 70% of my draft budget is hurt".

HISTORY Tuesday, self-diagnosed: "Getting relegated is probably going to be the best thing long term for my physical and mental health but I don't want to get relegated. What's that called?" Next chair, a man who knows: "Amburgers". Same breath: "I've planed out my workout plan and diet for if I get relegated but if I stay in the league I'm not doing any of that".

If relegated. The diet, as planned.

If he stays up. "I'm not doing any of that".

10:34 PATIENT "Make no mistake, no one cares about you and when you're down in a ditch covered in injured players, bad breaks and need friends the most, that's when they'll prove your ultimate truth: the world is dark and you are alone and you'll be relegated the same way you came into the league: alone and scared."

10:40 READING Prescribes himself an essay, "The Tail End", on how much of your time with the people you love is already gone. "I'll read this for perspective"

10:41 CO-PATIENT "A friend sent me this a while back and he told me how inspiring it was and I told him how depressed I was after reading it"

10:42 PATIENT "Hahahahahahaha 60 super bowls left Dallas."

10:45 PATIENT "It turns out that when I graduated from high school, I had already used up 93% of my in-person parent time.... It also turns out that I'm probably 93% through my time in the premier league. This last 7% is about to get BUCK WILD!"

10:58 BREAKTHROUGH "Passive loss would be sad. What you actually carry is a verdict: the good thing that could exist doesn't, and the reason is you. ... That's not a feeling. That's a courtroom, and you're prosecuting. ... They made you a good fantasy manager, a careful leader of the discord, a man who sees what could be. ... That's not a character flaw. That's a grief injury that got installed into a personality structure that was already primed to receive it. ... your mind over-generalized it starting from the cowboys and into fantasy football. The lesson was real. The application is broken."

11:04 PATIENT "As I identify my own loss and how sacred my premier status is. My understanding of the anxious Amburgers grows. Of course Rachaad white was going to score. ... I need to know he will score on Monday night and watch anyways to prove what I know to be true. And maybe... just maybe it breaks my way once in a while"

11:09 PATIENT "BUT I RISE One, is this or is this not the LANA STRAW PREMIER LEAGUE? Yes, it is. Two, do I or do I not currently have a pulse? Yes, I do. Let's play FANTASY FOOTBALL"

11:37 DISCHARGE The Nightmares, posting a song for the patient: "for you [Tomorrow Good]. See you the peens next year"

Chief complaint. Twenty years of fantasy football, "never done an auction or fab" before this one. In his own words: "I think I have Parker Washington in every single league. ... You know, like Jonah Coleman. I have him in every single league sitting in my IR spot." Coleman is in this league's IR spot too.

Course of treatment. The quarterback was the first organ to fail. He paid "like $4 for Justin Herbert, but I could have gotten Caleb Williams for $4 too," and spent four losing weeks learning it one quarterback at a time: "obviously I'm not scoring many points mostly because of my quarterback situation". Week 6 the ward won again, 108.70-104.92 over Backdoor Heat, on 22.7 from Bhayshul Tuten, whom Backdoor Heat had sold him two weeks earlier. Same game, Davante Adams scored 5.4, ruptured his left hamstring, and by Week 7 was off the roster, the only discharge the chart recognizes.

Consult. He now takes referrals. To Tomorrow Good, 70% of whose draft budget is hurt: "You can pick up Herbert off the wire. I'm sure Adam Gase will totally fix that offense". Bed 10 is made.

Every station has the eleven o'clock caller. Sunday night, done at 91.28, Tomorrow Good put the hotline on speed dial and left messages for a show that was not picking up. "Draft weekend on my yacht 2027". "I'm going to start a prediction market against TDs for guys I start. I'm about to be rich guys!" Then: "But drake London will score a TD this year right? RIGHT?!" London scored 10.2. Then the Nightmares read out the letter that keeps coming in.

> Love, [Tomorrow Good]

Amburgers, the producer, answered as Eminem's biggest fan. Tomorrow Good did not dispute the handwriting. One more request for a man 4-2 downstairs: "if I end up in peens will you forgo your promotion to stay with me. To comfort me. To support me until champions league becomes premier".

"It was great….#DezCaughtIt"

SHARED TRAUMA

Two folding chairs, Tuesday. Amburgers apologized for making the list. The Hineys: "I jest. I love amburgers and am just negging you because I miss you in our league." "Plus we have shared trauma because we are cowboys fans". Amburgers: "I'm starting to lose hope that trauma will be the story for the rest of our lives..." The Hineys: "For the rest of Jerry's life." Different Jerry.

THE SUGGESTION BOX · TUESDAY

Hot. Sports. Opinions.

Public comment, Tuesday. Amburgers, at the lectern in a tie: "Get rid of the 7th place playoff team make the 6th spot the points for wildcard". Tomorrow Good, from the back row: "Let's do 5 down 4 up. Who cares about who is in what league". Amburgers: "Man, I wish we were recording the podcast tonight. I got some Hot. Sports. Opinions." Tomorrow Good read them into the record. "His points 1. I'll get promoted 2. I won't have to fight against TGND 3. I can relax and enjoy the weekend 4. I'll get promoted".

Jerry's motion smelled of gasoline: "Everyone gets someone else's team next week". Boom, holding last month's minutes, on a Nightmares plan for the chop league: "Great idea. That I said a month ago in this suggestion box, that no one responded to. Classic."

SOUTHERN CULTURE · WEDNESDAY

Nine by Two

The Champeens keep an injury report. Southern Culture filed his own entry in September, between a Panthers confession and a Pat Bryant question: "I had a botched vasectomy on Friday because my shit is too meaty and the doc had to "throw in the towel". Not kidding". Then: "I could use a vas god". Jerry listed him as "Spencer "My Shit's Too Meaty" Jones" and offered power tools.

Wednesday the update hit the trade room, three characters off a chart: "9 x 2". Tomorrow Good, for the room: "Dick dimensions?"

> AMBURGERS · WEDNESDAY, FOR THE RECORD

QUIET WEEK · EVERYONE ELSE UPSTAIRS

I HEART THE SEAHAWKS · Lost 92.54 to 83.32 to All Gold. H Town: "Brandon Aubrey's stinker going to haunt [the Seahawks]". 2-4, fewest points in the Premier.

BACKDOOR HEAT · Lost 108.70 to 104.92 to Jackin' Goff, Bryce Young's 21.84 on the bench. Holds the wild card.

PEENS BOUND · Beat the Hineys 99.76 to 83.52, Tyler Shough's 29.96 on the bench.

SHINY HINEYS · Lost to Peens Bound. Tre Tucker, 24.2, on the bench.

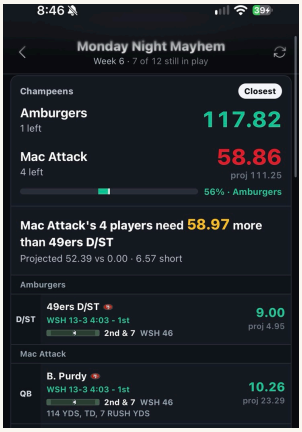
ALL GOLD, NO GLORY · 4-2. Beat the Seahawks with Kyle Pitts' 20.5 on the bench.

H-TOWN HOLY ROLLERS · Lost the brothers' game to Fart Toot 120.80 to 93.18. Texans D/ST, negative 2.00.

THE CHAMPEENS · MONDAY NIGHT

Not Quite Whiny Bitch Mode

Amburgers went into Monday night about 80 up on Mac Attack and held his own wake. The deceased won by 16.26.



Misery.

The wake opened Sunday night, the guest of honor still breathing and up about 80. He picked the music. "I can't wait for [Mac Attack] to break my heart tomorrow in the most unimaginable way and not even realize it until like Thursday at 6:57pm…" Monday he climbed in, the 49ers in Washington and his own defense holding the lid: "This is misery I'm so effed". The Nightmares, with a casserole: "I think you have too little faith in how bad Washington is". "That's precisely it. Purdy is going to run rough shot with cmc and Evans and run the score up and f me in the a".

Then a candle in the window. "Okay and now Evans getting maybe hurt is giving me enjoyment". "This is not okay". Tomorrow Good, officiating: "Just a "protect him for the second half" kind of injury". He blew the candle out. "Holy moly I am so toast". "I'm going to bed". He rose at 113.82 to 97.56 and explained the miracle away first: "I don't want to hear it [Jigba] I was a diggs bomb away from losing and the niners offense sucked at the end. I was fortunate".

> Oh, I really need to say sorry to you, [Amburgers]. It must've been so hard worrying that Stefon Diggs was gonna score his first 50 yard touchdown in five years.
> THE KICKERS N JIGBA · TUESDAY

The Throne gave the eulogy anyway. Front pew: "No no no he had 3 niners offensive players including cmc and purdy and they really laid an egg in the second half. ESPN had it at like 50/50 at one point." The Jigba: "Did ESPN say it was 50-50?! That sounds dramatic." "I recant everything". The ruling, entered in the book: it is "a little bit too much to say his antics are "whiny bitch Mode". But that is the general direction I think." Amburgers took the plaque: "Whiny bitch mode feels excessive but I thank you none the less".

THE JSN MARKET · THURSDAY

FROM	FOR JAXON SMITH-NJIGBA	NOTE
Jerry	Devaughn Vele + $50 FAAB
Nightmares	Josh Downs + $31 FAAB
Jerry	Breece Hall + $69 FAAB	"Nice"

Amburgers set JSN on the appraisal table Thursday: "per the podcast this is the kinda tasty stuff I get". The Nightmares appraised his own bid. "It's a WR 1 for a WR2 + FAAB? Seems fair to me". At kickoff he revised it: "Games started. Value had shifted in my favor". JSN scored 20.4. Jerry worked the far wall. "…..JSN looking washed". "Time to bail before the value tanks". Amburgers put the receiver back in the case. "I know it's tough watching my one receiver get more targets in one game than all of yours combined…does make one covetous".

WINGS AND A TRADE · THURSDAY

Celery sticks reserved a table: "Wings and football tonight at wingzup 7 pm if anyone wants to join". Amburgers came early, a contract under the napkin. "Enjoy some wings and trades!" Celery signed before the first basket. "Accepted". He got C.J. Stroud, sat him for 25.48, and posted the high anyway, 125.40, his first week back under the name Jackin' Goff demanded. Celery: "Maybe it will bring me luck". Jackin' Goff: "I think it will! Do it".

JERRY'S MARKET · TUESDAY

Jerry, 1-5, opened the trunk Tuesday. "For the amount of crashing and burning my team is doing I'm getting ZERO motion in the trade offers". One car stopped. The wrong one. "[Amburgers] I know beggars cant be choosers but if you send me a dobbins trade offer again I'm going to block you". Amburgers: "You just said it yourself … beggar". Jerry shut the trunk. "I have standards". "If you're gonna f me at least buy me dinner first".

AROUND THE PEENS

CHASE IS MY LEADER · 5-1 · Hand raised: "Hypothetically speaking, if I won the league and got promoted…would I be the first rookie team to do so?" Tuesday he circled his 597.78 points against, fewest in the league: "Is this good?" "Someone help me find where [Jerry] is at on the list…." Jerry is the bottom, 805.12.

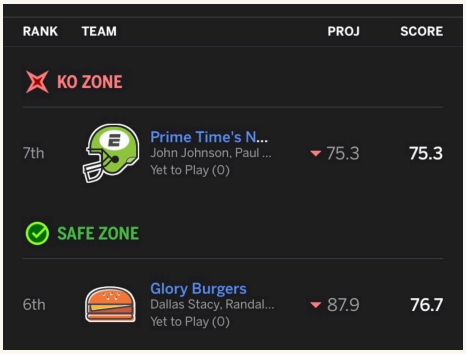
OTTER · 5-1 · "I got offered a kicker for ken Walker. That was tempting." Jerry: "As I said in the offer "looks like you need a kicker" Sorry for trying to help!" Walker: 27.9.

PRIME LIME TIME · 2-4, WILD CARD · "I just want Coach Saban to yell at my entitled, soft roster of full divas for one week".

LAST PLACE LEAVES

Prime Time's Next Door, Chopped

Last week it survived by 0.66. This week it scored 75.28, lost by 13.02, and left DeVonta Smith on the bench for 17.0. Six remain.



1.4 points of daylight.

The Knockout has one rule and a trapdoor, and Monday night the Nightmares stood at the lever reading the board aloud. Seventh, Prime Time's Next Door, the duo of Tomorrow Good and Prime Lime Time, 75.3. Sixth, on the same plank 1.4 points up, Glory Burgers, the duo of Amburgers and All Gold. The lever offered the condemned a way out: "[Tomorrow Good] needs a fumble and then a cmc injury to win". Amburgers, busy sweating a different Monday night against the same 49ers, did not want to hear about McCaffrey's health. "Stop it". A beat. "I wouldn't hate that though".

Tomorrow Good called the game from the plank: "Just keep that clock running and keep putting up points". "They need to protect whites shoulder". Prime Lime Time felt the floor move. "Couple of FUMBLEs Now. This hurts". Glory Burgers stepped off at 88.30. The door opened under 75.28. DeVonta Smith's 17.0 stayed folded on the bench.

THE ESTATE SALE · WEDNESDAY WAIVERS

PLAYER	BUYER	FAB
Bijan Robinson	Yes Diamonds	$368
Kyren Williams	Michael's Magnificent Hiney	$149
Sam LaPorta	Glory Burgers	$117
Josh Jacobs	Michael's Magnificent Hiney	$51
Jalen Coker	Backdoor Warriors	$35
Matthew Stafford	Glory Burgers	$28
DeVonta Smith	Yes Diamonds	$1

Thirty-four dollars short.

Yes Diamonds cleared a locker for Bijan by dropping Terry McLaurin, knee and all. Meaty Balls raised the paddle twice, $115 on Kyren and $15 on Jacobs, and left with nothing. The Hineys' duo took both.

Amburgers had two Monday nights going at once, this one and his Champeens game, and narrated both from the plank: "As macatttack is sneaking up on me" / "Then it'd be kaleon time" / "For team amburgers". The plank held.

	WEEK 6, SEVEN CLUBS	PTS

THE CHOPPED, IN ORDER · Fart Toot Sneak (Week 1) · The Otter is Jackin Goff (Week 2) · Boomer Frogs (Week 3) · Cowboys September Farts (Week 4) · JackaWhack (Week 5) · Prime Time's Next Door (Week 6).

THE GUEST · JACKIN' GOFF

Scribing Points on Stone

Jackin' Goff took the guest chair after an 0-4 start, and the pod found out it had booked a founding father.

Thursday the guest chair was a rocking chair. Jackin' Goff sat down after an 0-4 start and started at the beginning of recorded time, when a league was three restaurant coworkers and a spreadsheet. "I've been playing for so long that there wasn't websites for it… We did everything on Excel." Box scores came by paper: "someone had to go get a USA Today on Monday." "we only had three people… two brothers and me. And to make things a four… we called that person the extra bitch."

He won both years, which is easier with three men in the draft. "my team consisted of LaDainian Tomlinson, Priest Holmes, and Sean Alexander… those are the top three running backs." His one scandal was a tight end listed at fullback. "I pulled a cheeky move and I drafted him as my fullback… he didn't log a single snap at fullback. So I had to remove him."

> I've been playing for over 20 years of fantasy football, I have never done an auction or fab.
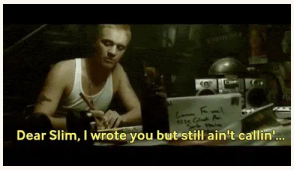
> JACKIN' GOFF · OCT. 15

He collects leagues the way other men collect bad quarterbacks. Seven "is just not enough. So I always join three or four free leagues." What he admires in Boom Baum is the opposite affliction, a "disdain for every player in the world or I guess love for every player in the world because he's just willing to trade anybody."



The pod also takes fan mail.

Then the basement line lit up. Jerry, congratulating "the relegated Ramsey on his addition to the win column," as a hex. The producer briefed the panel: "He likes to watch the world burn a little bit." Jerry, next day: "You guys are right about point against for me but that's an excuse. Our team had a players only meeting and we're ready to win now." The meeting lost 117.84 to 112.60.

THE WIRE

Four Bids for C.J. Stroud

Six claims cleared before dawn Wednesday. The Jigba read the report by porch light: "This must be the most desperate looking waiver offers report I have ever seen…"

CLAIMS FAAB DOLLARS

TOMORROW GOOD NEVER DIE C.J. Stroud, $16, over Jackin' Goff ($11), the Jigba ($5) and H Town ($2). Owned him for eleven hours, then sold him to the loser of the auction for Jakobi Meyers.

BACKDOOR HEAT DeMario Douglas, $18. Boom Baum bid $15.

THE KICKERS N JIGBA Terrance Ferguson, $10, five bids, currently on IR. The winner, admiring the field he beat: "5 bids for an injured Terrance Ferguson".

H-TOWN HOLY ROLLERS Omar Cooper Jr., $4. Unopposed. The congregation said amen.

TOMORROW GOOD NEVER DIE Makai Lemon, $3, tied with the Jigba. The coin landed where the Jigba says it always lands. "Such bs". Lemon scored 6.80 last week.

TOMORROW GOOD NEVER DIE Caleb Douglas, $2. Rode to the Jigba's that afternoon in Stroud's trunk.

Tomorrow Good Never Die
ADDED WR - Makai Lemon ($3, TIED with The Kickers n Jigba)
DROPPED QB - Jameis Winston

The tiebreaker.

HEARD AT THE DESK

The Hineys stood on the Desk Thursday with AJ Brown under one arm. "Anyone want to offer an RB for AJ brown?" "I can only ride on Braelon Allen and Wilson's coattails for so long". Jackin' Goff, from the doorway: "But you have Hampton". The Hineys: "Hampton will be good after McDaniels gets fired next week".

Monday the Jigba rang Peens Bound's doorbell with a sample case. "I just sent you something. You might be tempted by Josh." The foot went in the door. "Jacoby Myers is a pro's pro". "People love him. I love him Trevor Lawrence loves him. The Patriots fans used to love him. I think you'd really like him." "Denzel wants to play for a championship." The door closed. Meyers went to Tomorrow Good Wednesday, in the Stroud deal.

From the gallery, the Nightmares, receipt in hand: "hey, i offered you $30 FAAB for JSN and you acted like it was an insult. now you like cash deals?"

"I'm glad I got him. Feels good"

EDITOR'S LETTER

Dear Monday Night

You know what you did. Some of you know what you did.

Dear Monday Night, you used to have the decency to arrive on Mondays. This week you let yourself in at Sunday lunch, and Celery sticks opened his app and found you already sitting in his lineup: "When fantasy just feels like a Monday before Monday."

The Guy Next Door brought you a 3.56-point lead and every reason to feel good about it, and CeeDee Lamb walked him out by the elbow for 21.90. Boom, buried by Backdoor Heat with George Pickens still on the field, leaned into the television and asked for "45 more points", which, to be fair to Boom, was close to what it would have taken. And before you had even kicked off, Jerry, 1-6 and all alone down there, filed a request in writing: "please be gentle as you tell the story of Jerry GM Jerry Owner this week."

There is one manager you have never met, and he is asleep. Texas Tornado's Bush writes what he wants on a napkin, turns off the lamp and leaves you to it, and in the morning he is 7-0, the last unbeaten team in Lana Straw. He has looked at the rest of us, the ones who sat up with you asking George Pickens for things, and he does not understand what we are doing: "I don't know why we don't all do this." He put it more plainly over coffee. "The Bush does not watch Monday night. Monday night watches him".

Yours, up past bedtime, the Straw

COVER STORY · TEXAS TORNADO'S BUSH · 7-0 · PART I

Once Upon a 7-0

A bedtime story in four chapters, about a prince who wrote what he wanted on a napkin and went to sleep, and a king on a golden river who stayed up talking.

CHAPTER ONE

In Which Nothing Can Go Wrong

Once upon a time, in a kingdom of twelve castles, there lived a prince called Texas Tornado's Bush who had never lost a game and could not have told you why. Friday the oracle gave him 99.9 percent and a shrug: "Undefeated with the 5th-most points. Don't ask how, just ride it." Amburgers, the clerk, asked the question that gets everyone in a fairy tale killed: "Nothing can go wrong right?" The prince answered for the whole kingdom. "Nothing can go wrong. Everything is going according to plan."

The phone was green before he opened his eyes.

CHAPTER TWO

The King on the Golden River

Upriver lived the only other unbeaten man in the land, the king of the Kickers n Jigba, 6-0 with 971 points, who in September had been told he was living in a river and said he was soaking it in, "Cause I know it can change." A king talks when he wins, and Thursday he was still going when the commissioner's lineup came out projected for 143. "I'll take the under. NCT on it, Scott?" The commissioner offered a duel on points, man to man, and the king called it what it was: "Bunch of pansies won't back up their big mouths". His terms: "If you spot me, Josh, Alan's average weekly output in my QB spot., You're on". Josh Allen was on bye. The commissioner, laughing, agreed to pay the wages of a man with the week off, then scored 118.94 to the king's 92.72. That same morning the king had thought out loud about the prince the way a man thinks about a girl who will not text back: "Am I insane for considering trading away JSN to [the Bush] even though he doesn't respond to my DMs and says mean things about me in his "Rip it and let it Rip" sessions?" Boom, gently: "Josh ignores me about 75% of the time."

CHAPTER THREE

The Napkin

Every fairy tale needs a spell, and this one was cast at Sunday lunch by a peasant called Backdoor Heat, who meant it as a curse: "At least it's better than Texas's Bush waking up to winning!" The prince took it as a schedule. "I fully plan to go to bed tonight peacefully knowing I'll wake up tomorrow to another Texas Tornado Bush W." The Guy Next Door, who lost to him this way last week, checked the fine print: "I'm just surprised he knows neither team has someone playing on Monday night". By nightfall the prince was ahead and worried. "That field goal would have given me some comfort". The clerk read him his rights: "You're not allowed to feel anxiety when you're ahead. The anxiety police will come get you". "The Anxiety Police are keeping me awake right meow". Upriver, with nothing left to lose, the king took the badge. He patrols now as Njigba's Anxiety Police.

CHAPTER FOUR

The Morning After

He woke up 7-0, 115.90 to 92.72. Trey McBride, the man the king had wanted, scored 23.1 against him. Jaxon Smith-Njigba scored 27.8, the best line in the game, for a king who lost by 23.18 to the prince who does not answer his DMs. The golden river went out from under him and turned to rapids. Monday the prince came down to the trophy committee, fresh off his motion that each gemstone on the new trophy be a different type of anal wart, and explained the magic to a room that had not asked: "I suggest writing down on a napkin what you want to happen during the Sunday or Monday night game then just going to bed. When you wake up, you have a W. I don't know why we don't all do this." Then the verse he carries like a man reading off his own crest: "The Bush does not watch Monday night. Monday night watches him".

Sunday night the court gathered on the bank to watch the king go over. Boom: "how does it feel to be with the commoners again?" The False Hopes lit a candle for his "Throne of Lies arc". Then two days of nothing from the loudest man in the land. Wednesday he surfaced downstream in the Knockout, where his duo had just hung 151.02, and found Peens Bound to say it to: "Get your projection up, boy!"

"It's terrible. I don't know how yall do it."

Fantasy Pawn & Trade

Boom Baum sold Lamar Jackson to the store across the street, bought him back, and lost. Then he built the store, so he would have somewhere to leave the review.

Open late. All trades final.

The storefront went up Saturday night, neon and all: gold jacket, dollar-sign chain, and in the bargain bin, in full pads, the quarterback who has crossed this street more often than the mail. "Buyer beware." The proprietor was on the sidewalk before the paint dried, "You sold him to me first!", and he had the receipt: Boom had shipped Lamar across the street himself, eight days earlier, for Jayden Daniels. Boom hung the owner's portrait in the window anyway. "Can you trust this man?" The owner held the pose: "I'd buy Lamar from him, no questions asked, and no refunds".

The one-star review went up Sunday before the sun did, and the owner was already behind the counter with a Gandhi quote Gandhi never said. Peens Bound, from the parking lot, a fresh Lamar offer in his glovebox: "As he's sending me Lamar trades ...". H Town arrived to defend the proprietor and walked face-first into the sign. "- All Gold no Glory" / "*No Gold" / "Guess I will have to learn your shitty name now that you are not getting relegated". Boom had painted what the ESPN app said. The proprietor looked up at his own awning: "I had it wrong in the ESPN app and I'm so dumb that I got it mixed up myself".

Warning ⚠ No Gold, All Glory Fantasy Pawn shop is a scam. [Randall] sells broken players. I went in looking for relief from my poverty traded away my draft capital future and got Lamar Jackson on crutches and a roster held together by a jock strap and a mouth guard up my anus. No refunds. No integrity. No glory. Only thing Randall hasn't injured is his ability to screw people over.

RESPONSE FROM THE OWNER · LATER THAT MORNING

Time for a fantasy football intervention.

In an act of extreme charity, and because I am a moral and upstanding Lana Straw citizen. I traded Jayden Daniels to you for a busted Lamar Jackson. Daniels turned in the 7th best QB performance of the week despite playing without a brain. My kindness wasn't good enough. Like Adam Sandler in Uncut Gems, Boom can never be happy and is always chasing that next high, the next parlay, looking to fill the void within.

The next week you asked for your money back and even though I had the luxury of waiting to see if Lamar could get back to his old form, I traded him back to you because "he clearly needs this more than me, poor guy" and accepted a token amount of draft dollars so you would feel better about yourself.

Time to look in the mirror [Boom], maybe the broken player is you.

REPRINTED IN FULL — Boom Baum · Sunday night · Premier chat

I just want to say,

I have lost more games this year already than the entire last year. Last season was so much fun. 1st place in the regular season. I could relax and make trades and just be an all around great person.

This year is different. My players don't score, unless I trade them then they score lots (here's looking at you Nabers). This year just sucks. My team is terrible and no matter how many players I trade or try to make good informed decisions my team is awful and I lose.

I want my old team back. I want to feel what Texas Trim My Bush and Ole Willie My Nillie is feeling. I miss it.

The grief had started in the afternoon. Boom had claimed at lunch that on days like this he just dances it off, and the commissioner wanted the footage. "Prove it!" Boom sent a still. "No, I want the real thing. Tik tok style. It will make you feel better." "I am too depressed" / "I can't experience joy right now. It feels too wrong."

Monday night he had George Pickens in the flex, the Cowboys on the set, and a stat line already written out for Pickens by hand, in a scoring system this league has never used. Jackin' Goff caught it from across the room. Boom kept yelling at the television anyway: "Come on Pickens! Just score 45 more points!" Pickens finished with 13.7.

Wednesday night Amburgers drew the Voicemail Extravaganza winners live in the Stream Room, and one of the three names belonged to the man who cannot experience joy right now. A package is on its way. So, he insists, is next year: "3 on 3 bball tournament as a part of the hemorrhoid games next year." The Guy Next Door: "Does basketball require ballistic movements?" Boom: "Yes. But next year I hope to explode".

"I feel like my season is similar to the pain of this baby when he goes to his first day of kindergarten."

Please Be Gentle

Monday afternoon Jerry filed one request: "please be gentle as you tell the story of Jerry GM Jerry Owner this week." So: lights low, voices down, the numbers tucked in under a blanket.

1-6
the record. By his own count, the one win was a gift from the commissioner.

913.64
points allowed, most in any league. The bot said 805. It got worse.

5.0
Harrison Butker, filling in for Cam Little's bye. Three more and he still loses by 0.20.

-1.0
Patriots D/ST, Thursday night, before anything else had gone wrong.

Last week this franchise was the Joker, scrolling for Batman photos in the basement with the lights low. This week he is on the couch with the blanket up to his chin, and the week has to be told to him the way you tell a six-year-old where the dog went.

It started Thursday, sweetheart. The Patriots defense scored minus one point. "Negative..... NEGATIVE POINTS". Friday the bot's power rankings came for him by name: "805.12 points allowed. Your opponents hate you specifically." Jerry had a suspect before lunch. "I can't prove it yet but @Fart Toot Squeek is behind that". By dinner he had gone full Dr. Evil at the False Hopes, pinky and all, and Boom cast the commissioner as his Mini-Me on the spot.

Sunday night Celery sticks was done at 108.52 and Jerry sat at 100.32 with one man left, a kicker. "Just so this is clear, Cam Little is on a bye week and and I had to pickup Butker." Down 8.20, the pregame prayer was at least arithmetically honest: "Need a touchdown and then some from Harrison Butker tonight.....".

Amburgers, watching: "Butker has lost it". Jerry, gently: "I'm gonna be sick." And then, quieter: "I can't take another loss".

Butker hit one from distance, five points, and the night froze at 105.32, down 3.20, game still running. Celery sticks, winning with Drake Maye's 28.94 on his bench, could not look. "I was like I'm turning everything off until it's over". Upstairs the commissioner was doing math. "Now the only thing to root for is Butker to get 3 more points exactly." Jerry: "You're a SICK freak". Jerry, a moment later: "And I love it". The commissioner, to the whole house: "This is why I will never root to ban kickers".

The three never came. Thursday, asked Maye or Stroud, Jerry had given Celery the week's only lineup advice: "Go no QB". Celery benched Maye and won anyway. His own quarterback, Bryce Young, scored 5.42, as close to no QB as ESPN allows. He was the only man in the league who took his advice.

Exhibit A. Note which man is begging.

"what's the punishment for last place in all of Lana straw?" The Guy Next Door asked it in the main room, with everyone home, and Jerry answered before the commissioner could. "Don't. Please. Stop." Amburgers wants a toilet bowl with a punishment at the bottom of it. The Guy Next Door wants video ("Good shit too. I don't watch 720p"), and when Jerry told him to be careful what he wished for, he was plain about it: "I just want to see you run".

So Jerry, from under the blanket, offered to run. "What if the video is me running, but as you watch, you begin to realize I'm in your backyard. Running across your flowers and turnips. Doing 'horns down' on your own turf." He had the dialogue ready. "'Honey that pale man with the skinny legs is running in the backyard again'".

Friday's voicemail was not a gentle man's voicemail. "If Scott hadn't changed the rules… to give me that first win, I would be completely winless." Then, sweetly: "I hope that you don't think that I'm going down without a fight. I'm taking all of you with me. We're going to have a policy change at the end of this season." The commissioner heard "straight up nihilistic jokerism" and made the first policy change himself: a man who has never touched another owner's roster will touch this one the day Jerry starts dropping players.

The same commissioner had explained why no Champeens guest had ever come on: "too scared to come on here with his one-in-five wreck, his tail tucked between his legs". Jerry: "Just to clarify, I didn't turn Scott down because 'I'm scared', I wasn't available. I have proof." The proof is at left.

His Knockout duo, Yes Diamonds, went to bed Monday with the chop still open. "I'm going to sleep but if I wake up and we've been chopped this might be last you hear from me until next season". They cleared it by 4.14 while he slept, and by Wednesday his partner, Peens Bound n Down, "deserves a lot of credit for Yes Diamonds becoming the juggernaut of the chop league." Amburgers: "Juggernaut?"

Sunday night, the kicker done and the backyard scouted, he got to the part that should worry the whole league. "The craziest part of all of this is that next season I'll pay my fees and start all over again." The Guy Next Door: "You have to pay?!" Jerry: "In more ways than one."

"My wife holds this over my head for 12 months"

THE ADVICE LINE

Celery sticks, Thursday, thirty minutes out: "I have 30 min to decide to play stroud or keep maye in." The False Hopes: "I'd probably play Stroud just to diversify in case NE has a stinker". The fine print: "But usually if I run two QBs, the one I don't play scores higher". Jerry: "Go no QB". Stroud 18.52, Maye 28.94 on the bench. After the game: "well Zach, I'm sorry you listened to me about QBs".

Sunday: "When fantasy just feels like a Monday before Monday." Won, 108.52 to 105.32. Amburgers, who invented it: "The amburgers way to deal with fantasy anxiety".

AROUND THE PEENS

OTTER · 5-2 · Friday, down a tight end: "T. Warren is being a real D.B. and being 'injured', and ruled out for Sunday. So, I need a TE." "[Amburgers] go ahead and send me another trade offer involving Dobbins, cause we all know it will happen." "How many times you sent him out in a trade proposal this season, 34?" Amburgers: "21.5 times actually". Otter settled for Tyler Higbee, bought from Prime Lime Time with Keon Coleman. Higbee brought 2.4 to a 111.32 to 83.60 beating at the Gators.

NEAUX GOLD, ALL GLORY · 2-5 · 144.02 on The Jackal, 80.92, with Caleb Williams 24.1, Jameson Williams 23.6 and Omar Cooper Jr. 21.0. The Jackal's season reads L-W-L-W-L-W-L, so everyone saw this coming except the Jackal.

PRIME LIME TIME · 2-5, WILD CARD · Holds the points seed at 792.62, by 1.64 over Neaux Gold. Lost to Amburgers 129.20 to 100.86 with Matthew Stafford's 20.0 on the bench.

LAST PLACE LEAVES

Backdoor Warriors, Chopped

Saquon Barkley scored 14.1 on their bench. They went out by 4.14. Five remain.

Monday afternoon three duos stood on the Knockout's trapdoor with one game left to sort them out. Glory Burgers led Yes Diamonds by 0.14. Backdoor Warriors, Backdoor Heat's duo, sat under both of them holding CeeDee Lamb and a ticket to Dallas-Philly. The Cowboys November False Hopes leaned over the rail and asked Jerry, half of Yes Diamonds: "Would you trade losing in Chop League this week if it's because CeeDee puts up 26.05 points in a Dallas rout over Philly". Jerry: "You're a sick nasty freak for posing a question that hurts me in two ways." "I want to win, bottom line."

Up on the high ground the False Hopes read Amburgers, half of Glory Burgers, his margin: "y'all are up by 0.14 pt". Amburgers kept his feet up. "We're well clear of the backdoor warriors though. We're fine". "Just the question of how bad we want to be ahead of diamonds".

Jerry turned out the light with CeeDee Lamb still to play against him and left the league a note in case Dallas got him: "I'm going to sleep but if I wake up and we've been chopped this might be last you hear from me until next season". Dallas routed Philly. Lamb delivered everything the False Hopes promised except the number, 21.9 instead of 26.05, the distance between a farewell address and a Wednesday spent calling a fifth-place team a juggernaut. Upstairs, Backdoor Heat scored 137.32, held the wild card, and still lost a whole franchise through the floor.

jug·ger·naut

noun · Knockout usage, Wed., Oct. 28

1. A massive, unstoppable force.

2. Yes Diamonds, Week 7: 85.46 points, fifth of six, 4.14 above the trapdoor. Drake London's 16.1 on the bench.

"[Diamond Dogs] deserves a lot of credit for Yes Diamonds becoming the juggernaut of the chop league." Jerry GM + Jerry Owner

Christian Watson	Glory Burgers	$110

The Bush's duo paid $251 for the receiver who came 4.15 short of saving the Warriors; Lamb now plays Monday nights for a man who sleeps through them. The juggernaut spent $160 on a running back.

Thursday the Jigba showed up with a name tag already printed, "The Anxious Amburgers", and an NCT to pin it on: Meaty Balls outscores Glory Burgers, you wear it. "You scared?" Amburgers: "I won't be bullied by the Throne". Meaty Balls then scored 151.02, best in the Knockout, 51.72 clear of the Burgers. The only thing that saved Amburgers his name was refusing to bet it.

Wait to Publish the Pod

No guest, no Peens, and a commissioner who asked his co-host to sit on the episode.

S05 EP08 · OUT FRI., OCT. 23 · RECORDED THURSDAY DURING BEARS-PATRIOTS

The standings in both flights; a voicemail block that ran thirteen minutes; Amburgers' four-down, four-up campaign; the Discord.

The Champeens have never sent a guest, and everyone knows who the commissioner blames. The Gators raised a hand from the back: "Dudes I'll be on your pod". Amburgers, the one Champeen with a microphone, prefers to lead another way: "I'm like the lead by example kind of guy."

Chase Is My Leader, 5-1 on a $100 waiver budget he has never touched, stumped the hosts for a full segment. "Who would have picked Oscar's team to be 5-1? Just insanity." Friday morning the answer came from an analyst nobody booked. The league's bot, ordered up by Amburgers overnight, ran 30,000 simulations and roasted the whole board, one sentence per franchise. The commissioner folded on the spot: "This feels like the best power ranking analysis I've ever seen". The Bush: "I love that @Lana Straw Bot is sassy".

GRADED: POD VS. BOT

THE HOSTS, THURSDAY NIGHT: 2 OF 3 · THE BOT, FRIDAY MORNING: 4 OF 7

- ✓ The commissioner, on the Premier wild card: "it would be backdoor heat at this point". 137.32 over Boom. Still is.
- ✓ Amburgers, on Jerry: "he's starting the Patriots against the Bears oh my gosh this guy's never gonna make playoffs". Patriots D/ST, –1.0. 1-6.
- ✗ The commissioner: Jackin' Goff "needs Caleb Williams to have an epic fourth quarter so that he can take down Shiny Hineys". Caleb 24.1. Hineys 142.38.
- ✓ The bot, on Fart Toot Squeek at 2-4: "The record is lying." 118.94. 3-4, still second in points.
- ✓ The bot, on Jackin' Goff: "Too little, too late, but cute." 105.82 to 142.38. 2-5.
- ✓ The bot, on Jerry: "Your opponents hate you specifically." Celery sticks, 108.52 to 105.32. 1-6.
- ✓ The bot, on the Jackal: "Lose next week, presumably." 80.92 to 144.02.
- ✗ The bot, on the Jigba: "Everyone else is playing for 2nd." 2nd won, 115.90 to 92.72.
- ✗ The bot, on Otter: "Otterly dominant." 83.60 to 111.32.
- ✗ The bot, on Chase Is My Leader: "Luck is a skill." 84.80 to 103.58, Dak's 26.3 benched.

Mid-recording the commissioner looked up from his phone like a man who has found a wallet. Jackin' Goff had cut Davante Adams, hamstring and all, and the claim would clear Friday. "Maybe wait to publish the pod here". "Hopefully this won't be published until I can claim him. Yeehaw."

The episode went out at midnight anyway, and the Jigba was at the window with $6 when waivers ran. The commissioner had brought $3 to a bid he announced on air. By breakfast the receipt hung in the pod's channel, a smiley over the $6, a frown over the $3.

"I love you Lanas far and wide, all of you, except for Chase."

Lamar Jackson Moves Again

Four deals. Lamar Jackson changed teams for the third time in eleven days.

FRI, OCT. 23 · 5:38 PM — Twenty-five minutes on the block

BOOM BAUM RECEIVES	SHINY HINEYS RECEIVES
Emanuel Wilson	Tyjae Spears

CASH CONSIDERATIONS: THE HINEYS, "$2 TO ME FROM [BOOM] FOR THAT ONE"

THE FLOOR · The Hineys priced the merchandise out loud, "Wilson on the block for draft dollars. I'd rather play Braelon Allen this week", fine print included: "Bad matchup but RB is a wasteland". Boom, who has never walked past a sign, paid $2 for the wasteland and it scored 19.0 in his flex. Everything he already owned lost by 46.72.

SUN, OCT. 25 · 9:19 AM · CHAMPEENS — A tight end by kickoff

PRIME LIME TIME RECEIVES	OTTER RECEIVES
Keon Coleman	Tyler Higbee

CASH CONSIDERATIONS: NONE REPORTED IN THE CHANNEL

THE FLOOR · The Otter, in first place and out of tight ends, Saturday night: "I need a TE for tomorrow. Can anyone make a reasonable trade for this?" Prime Lime Time, 2-5, had Higbee on the porch by breakfast. Higbee gave the Otter 2.4 in a 27.72-point loss and Coleman gave Prime Lime 0.0 from the bench, a trade that helped nobody in either direction, which takes teamwork.

BIG TUE, OCT. 27 · 7:52 AM — Swift and Olave, seven days a Boom

H-TOWN HOLY ROLLERS RECEIVES	BOOM BAUM RECEIVES
Lamar Jackson ($14), Garrett Wilson ($23), D'Andre Swift ($28), Chris Olave ($25)	Tetairoa McMillan ($12), Emeka Egbuka ($16), Tee Higgins ($24), Breece Hall ($39)

CASH CONSIDERATIONS: NONE REPORTED IN THE CHANNEL · DRAFT VALUE $90 OUT, $91 IN, BOOM +$1

THE FLOOR · Lamar Jackson's passport: Boom to No Gold on Oct. 16, back to Boom Oct. 20, to H Town Oct. 27. Sunday Boom gave the No Gold pawn shop one star for selling him a quarterback on crutches. Tuesday he sold the crutches to H Town for Breece Hall, and the preacher, $91 lighter and one quarterback on crutches heavier, answered the room with one GIF: no school.

BIG WED, OCT. 28 · 7:44 PM · CHAMPEENS — Three starters off a 167

HOLDING THESE ALLIGATORS DOWN RECEIVES	COWBOYS NOVEMBER FALSE HOPES RECEIVES
A.J. Brown ($41), Saquon Barkley ($50), Colston Loveland ($7)	Kyle Pitts Sr. ($8), Emanuel Wilson, Malik Nabers ($27)

CASH CONSIDERATIONS: NONE REPORTED IN THE CHANNEL · DRAFT VALUE $98 TO THE GATORS, $35 BACK, GATORS +$63

THE FLOOR · The False Hopes swore fidelity to Loveland Thursday night, "Loveland, I never lost faith (don't look at my chats)", and sold him six days later with Saquon and A.J. Brown.

HEARD AT THE DESK

The Guy Next Door, at the exchange window: "How much fab can I get for a draft dollar?" Jerry: "2:1". "I thought fab was the yen". Jerry: "Yen keep looking".

TERMS OF ENDEARMENT

Peens Bound: "[Fart Toot Squeek] sends me trade offers like he's feasting on a dead carcass".

The Jigba: "I wish people sweet talked me the way I sweet talk my trade negotiation partners".

THE WIRE, IN BRIEF · Friday, the Jigba $6 for Davante Adams over the commissioner's $3. Wednesday: False Hopes $48, Stefon Diggs. The Guy Next Door $12 Vele, $9 Singletary. The Jigba $11, Ja'Kobi Lane.

PREMIER FINALS

Seven and Oh

The Bush beat the other unbeaten by 23.18. Of last week's seven teams at 2-4, two won. The other five are 2-5.

GAME OF THE WEEK · THE LAST UNBEATEN

TEXAS TORNADO'S BUSH 7-0 115.90 DEF. THE KICKERS N JIGBA 6-1 92.72

Six-and-oh met six-and-oh and only one of them had to be good at it. The Bush started Jonathan Taylor, five days off the Boom trade, for 18.0, and left Cam Skattebo, from the same trade, on the bench for 19.6, a mistake you can afford when you win by 23. The Jigba got 27.8 from Jaxon Smith-Njigba, 4.3 from his two flex starters combined, and knew exactly whose fault that was: "I can't buy a point from these dart throw flex starts! I'm so unlucky". The Bush is 7-0 with fewer points than five of the teams beneath him, and not one of the five has found the Sunday to prove it.

MATCHUPS

Shiny Hineys 142.38
Jackin' Goff 105.82

The Hineys on Tre Tucker: "If he is on my bench it's a guaranteed 100+ yards and TD". On the bench: 19.8, curse running.
